'Genetic Engineering' May Be Answer To Mental Retardation

By FRANK CAREY
AP Science Writer

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Scientists are studying daring concepts involving "genetic engineering" as part of their quest to conquer such inherited disorders as cystic fibrosis and some of the maladies that can cause mental retardation.

Conceding their ideas "approach science fiction," researchers attending an unusual conference here this month said developments like these are conceivable some time in the future:

A scientist in a hospital laboratory would "feed a certain synthetic chemical to a virus that is relatively harmless to man.

Implanted In Womb

Then he would implant the virus inside the womb of a pregnant woman in such a way that the virus ultimately would reach the developing embryo. It would then release inside fetal cells its chemical cargo consisting of man-made genes—artificial versions of the basic units of heredity which researchers are now trying to develop.

In this case, the virus would in effect be an emergency messenger boy carrying a gene which pre-natal analysis shows is missing or defective in the unborn child—an abnormality that otherwise would result in the child being born with systic fibrosis, a dreaded glandular disease.

Another Technique

Using another technique, surgeons would implant tiny glass beads in the womb of a pregnant woman. The hollow beads would be filled with an enzyme —a chemical trigger for a vital process—that is known to be missing from the developing embryo.

Through a tiny opening in the beads, the enzyme would slowly be released into the circulation of the embryo—and thereby prevent the child from being born with a hereditary metabolic disease known as phenylketonuria —or 'PKU' for short. Unless detected and treatment begun soon after birth, PKU can lead to mental retardation.

Techniques Described

These two conceptual techniques—the messenger boy viruses and the enzyme-releasing glass beads—were described by Dr. John H. Menkes of the University of California Medical Center, Los Angeles, at a special symposium on "Clinical Aspects of Inherited Disorders" at the University of Alabama Medical Center.

He said the ideas "approach science fiction," but added that researchers already are giving them serious thought.

Menkes indicated that when and if the methods are perfected, they would first be applied to treat children born with genetic defects.

But Dr. Layne H. Finley of the University of Alabama Medical Center told a reporter it's conceivable they ultimately could be applied in the pre-natal stage, within the womb.

Eye Early Application

The conference was designed to acquaint everyday practicing physicians—and dentists—with the latest developments and future prospects in the relatively new field of medical genetics.

The field embraces some 1,500 genetic diseases and disorders, ranging from Mongolism to color-blindness; from muscular dystrophy to hemophilia; from the "cry-of-the-cat disease" whose infant victims cry like cats to the controversial "XYY chromosome syndrome" that has been found in some criminals.

Other Highlights

Other conference highlights included:

1. New evidence that a technique involving tapping fluid from the womb of a pregnant woman—and allowing pre-natal analysis of heredity-carrying chromosomes of the embryo—can save the lives of significant numbers of unborn children. These are children who might otherwise be considered candidates for therapeutic abortions because their mothers had had previous defective children or were otherwise deemed "high risks" for producing others. The same technique—called amniocentesis—can be used for pre-natal determination of the child's sex.

2. Further evidence that heavy exposure of pregnant

Fear Red Overthrow Of Cambodian Rulers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some top Pentagon officials are saying privately only swift and substantial military aid can prevent a Communist overthrow of the new Cambodian government.

By the same token, some hold the view that the Cambodian situation, if exploited, might provide powerful leverage against Viet Cong and North Vietnamese forces using Cambodian territory as sanctuary from the Vietnam war.

This assessment became known Thursday after the White House disclosed Cambodia is receiving several thousand captured enemy weapons from South Vietnam—with U.S. approval.

The acknowledgement appeared certain to spark controversy in Congress where some members say aid to Cambodia would expand American involvement in Southeast Asia.

The White House said the go-ahead for shipment of AK47 automatic rifles—retrieved from the battlefield in South Vietnam —did not represent the Nixon administration's response to Cambodia's "extensive" request for U.S. arms.

That request, the White House said, is still under consideration.

Some high military officers, it was learned, favor lending a quick helping hand to the government of Premier Lon Nol which deposed Prince Norodom Sihanouk several weeks ago.

The next four or five weeks, it was said, pose a critical stage for the Lon Nol government. With aid during that period, the Lon Nol forces would have perhaps a 50-50 chance of seizing the initiative before the seasonal rainy season, it was said. After that, the weather would work to the advantage of the better trained Communist forces, sources indicated.

Some U.S. military officers expressed optimism that, benefitted quickly with new arms, the Cambodian government could rally its people against the North Vietnamese, a traditional foe.

This, in turn, might curb North Vietnamese operations from Cambodia across the border into South Vietnam.

Besides the possibility of U.S. arms aid, American officials are known to be exploring the idea of an international agreement to provide help to Cambodia to insure its neutrality.

S. Vietnamese Preparing For Big 'Invasion'

SAIGON (AP) — The South Vietnamese army is putting more artillery and troops along several hundred miles of the Cambodian border in preparation for more armed forays into Cambodia in pursuit of North Vietnamese and Viet Cong troops, informed Vietnamese sources said today.

"We have gone into Cambodia many times," said one source. "We expect to continue. We are paying more attention to the western side of South Vietnam. We are reinforcing it with more artillery. There are more air strikes along the border. We are reinforcing our outposts."

The buildup is heaviest in South Vietnam's 3rd Corps Tactical Zone, an area of 10,000 square miles sharing 231 miles of border with Cambodia. The border area runs in an arc from 35 miles west of Saigon to 100 miles northeast of the capital.

The sources estimate 40,000 to 50,000 North Vietnamese and Viet Cong troops are in eastern Cambodia. One source said Cambodian troops had withdrawn from all their outposts along the border because they were "afraid of the Viet Cong and North Vietnamese."

This source said there is no official agreement between South Vietnamese and Cambodian authorities for South Vietnamese forces to cross into Cambodia.

Anti-Cancer Drug Testing Approved

NEW YORK (AP) — The Food and Drug Administration has given approval for the testing on humans of a highly controversial anticancer drug, one the FDA has long refused to license.

The drug is Laetrile, the proprietary name for amygdalin, a chemical derived from apricot pits.

Great Benefits Claimed

While the drug's supporters claim great benefits among cancer patients, the American Cancer Society lists Laetrile among "unproven" drugs and says its studies find no objective evidence of benefit from it. Other cancer authorities have called it "dubious" or "worthless."

Under federal law, the FDA has banned sale and use of Laetrile because it has not gone through the process of legal and orderly testing to show that it is effective and safe, an FDA spokesman said.

The FDA gave permission for the first step toward any approval—the clinical testing—by granting a number, in this case No. 6,734, to an Investigative New Drug—IND—application filed on April 6 by the McNaughton Foundation of Sausalito, Calif.

No Judgment Made

This does not mean the FDA has made any judgment as to the worth or safety of the drug, the FDA official said. It means only that the proposal to investigate it in humans met certain requirements stipulated by the FDA.

The FDA spokesman said the IND application, like others, may be reviewed more fully and permission for the clinical testing could still be withdrawn if cause is found. Meanwhile, the clinical testing can begin at any time.

To Conduct Studies

The drug is being made legally available only for the clinical studies, not for general use among any cancer patients.

In Sausalito, Andrew McNaughton, head of the foundation which sponsors and promotes development of Laetrile, said "half a dozen top-flight physicians" will conduct the studies, involving more than 100 patients.

Word of the approval of the application came from Dr. Dean Burk, a well-known cancer researcher, who is head of the cytochemistry section, Laboratory of Biochemistry, National Cancer Institute.

Burk says he thinks Laetrile has a very high safety factor and shows "potential" for treating human cancers. He wrote to this effect in a letter last August to James Farmer, assistant secretary for administration of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

Farmer says he had asked Burk for an opinion as a scientist who had experience in animal testing of the drug.

While officials of the National Cancer Institute were not immediately available for comment, their associates made it clear that controversy exists concerning the merits of Laetrile.

The drug was developed and used over the last 50 years by the late Dr. Ernst T. Krebs Sr., and Dr. Ernst T. Krebs Jr., of San Francisco.

The time between the granting of an IND application and final approval of any drug by the FDA can take years. The clinical testing is a first step toward demonstrating to the satisfaction of the FDA that the drug is safe and does what it is claimed for it.

Threat Slows Marine Unit Withdrawals

WASHINGTON (AP) — Withdrawal of the remaining U.S. Marine Division from South Vietnam may be delayed because of an enemy threat against the northern most area of the country.

There have been strong indications for weeks that the 1st Marine Division was ticketed to come out of Vietnam as part of the next stage of U.S. troop cutbacks.

Pentagon sources say objections have been raised by some military leaders on grounds that early pullout of the Marine division would seriously weaken defenses in the northern I Corps.

The matter has been under discussion, Pentagon sources said, indicating the 1st Marine Division's departure could be held up for a time.

Sources hinted the pace of the overall troop withdrawal may be throttled down for some weeks, perhaps until it can be determined whether the North Vietnamese intend to mount a spring offfensive.

Recent intelligence reports have told of several North Vietnamese regiments moving into I Corps from Laos, and there is concern over the continuing presence of enemy troop concentrations above the demilitarized zone.

Condemned

ROBERT K. BEAUSOLEIL, 22, doesn't look very upset as he leaves court in Los Angeles after being sentenced to die in the gas chamber. He was convicted in the murder of Gary Hinman, 34, a musician who had befriended Charles Manson, leader of the "Manson Family" hippie cult. The Hinman killing is believed to be one of eight slayings involving Manson and followers.

Ending Draft No Breeze For Nixon

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon's plan to abolish the draft has drawn a cold reception from key members of Congress, and prospects for early clearance of his proposal to abolish college deferments are in doubt.

Although the college exemption plan set forth by the President Thursday was promised an early hearing in the Senate, House Armed Services Committee Chairman L. Mendal Rivers, D-S.C., said he planned no action on draft reform this year, only a review.

Nixon asked the authority to end educational exemptions in a message to Congress and announced he was abolishing on his own future occupational, agricultural and parental deferments. Only the student deferments require congressional approval.

At the same time Nixon announced a plan to begin phasing out the draft in July 1971, when the draft law expires and shift to an all-volunteer army.

John C. Stennis, D-Miss., chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, said he does not think an end to the draft "is in the realm of reality for several years to come" even after the end of the Vietnam war.

"We should just forget the idea that the draft could be eliminated or suspended until that war is well over," Stennis said.

The draft will be needed after that, he said, to prevent shortages for particular leadership and special skill slots.

Rivers said abolishing the draft might be an ideal and a goal to work for but "I can't see any way to do it now."

Under current regulations, 1.8 million students hold deferments, workers with agricultural exemptions total 23,000 and about 4 million men are deferred because of dependents, although not all of them because they are fathers.

Other deferments have been issued to school teachers, critical defense employes and police and firemen.

Rep. F. Edward Hebert, D-La., chairman of the House draft subcommittee said any action in Congress this election year would "invite disaster" by opening a pandora's box of wholesale, political draft overhaul.

Election Plan Fight Expected

WASHINGTON (AP) — A proposed constitutional amendment allowing the people to elect presidents directly faces a rugged final round in the Senate after a sharply fought committee triumph.

The Senate Judiciary Committee cleared the plan by an 11-6 margin Thursday, but a series of closely fought preliminary votes on rival proposals disclosed the divisiveness of the issue.

The direct vote amendment, approved by the House last September 339 to 70, needs a two-thirds vote of approval in the Senate to place it before state legislatures for possible ratification. Three-fourths' approval by the states is required.

Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., the sponsor, clung to a tactic that made the measure a big winner in the House. The senator said he hoped the rival proposals would be offered and defeated, forcing the Senate either to swing behind the direct election amendment or give up on changing the Electoral College system.

But Sen. James D. Eastland, D-Miss., Judiciary chairman, saw the narrow committee vote as a sign of sure defeat for Bayh's proposals and all the other alternative plans as well.

Bayh acknowledged the going will be tough, saying he expects a long and heated debate, possibly a filibuster.

Under the current system, voters choose Presidential electors in each state. They in turn cast their ballots for the presidential slate capturing the statewide vote.

Mary Jo Inquest Report Ruled Public Records

BOSTON (AP) — The Massachusetts Supreme Judicial Court says the transcript of testimony and the inquest report of Mary Jo Kopechne are public records and should be opened to the public promptly.

The ruling Thursday came shortly after counsel for Sen. Edward M. Kennedy asked the court to order release of the documents. Miss Kopechne drowned in Kennedy's car after it ran off a bridge last July.

The court left it to the state Superior Court to remove an order of impoundment which is keeping the papers secret. No indication was given when this would be done.

The Supreme Court said, "No person has any private property interest in these documents or any exclusive right to make copies of them." It added that it fails "to see any basis for the exercise of jurisdiction by the federal courts in these matters."

Trinidad Mutineers Release 5 Hostages

PORT OF SPAIN, Trinidad (AP) — Mutinous soldiers Thursday released six hostages —a high-ranking officer and five women—from Trinidad's main military base where they are holed up in support of Black Power demands.

Col. Joffre Serrette, a former commander of Trinidad's 720-man army, obtained the releases in negotiations with the rebels at the Tetron Bay base, site of Trinidad's only armory.

Serrette also persuaded the mutineers to transfer army officers they were holding hostage from detention cells to house arrest in their quarters on the base.

The mutiny erupted Tuesday after Prime Minister Eric Williams declared a state of emergency in an attempt to check increasingly violent demonstrations by Black Power advocates and unemployed youths and workers. The mutineers claim they have a majority of the army on their side, but their actual numbers are not clear.

The mutineers were reported asking for amnesty for more than a score of Black Power leaders arrested under the state of emergency.

Loyal troops have ringed the base, sealing it off. But the rebels' possession of the armory, and with it the government's chief stock of weapons, put the government in a tight spot.

The United States flew down one planeload of small arms Wednesday night but a spokesman for the State Department said there were no plans for further deliveries.

Child's Pajamas Rated Fire Trap

LANSING (AP) — Rep. Richard Allen dropped a piece of flannel — the kind used in most children's pajamas — into a dish, touched it with a match and watched the material quickly turn to ashes.

He repeated the process, this time using a piece of material treated with nonflammable substances. The flannel charred, but did not burst into flames.

"Many children suffer greatly and unnecessarily from burns in Michigan every year," Allen, an Ithaca Republican said. "Recent developments make it possible to treat most types of cloth to render them practically nonflammable."

Allen introduced a bill Thursday requiring clothes for young children be made of nonflammable material. The measure provides for misdemeanor penalties for violation of the regulations, with a fine of up to $500 or a one-year prison sentence.

Serrette also persuaded the mutineers to transfer army officers they were holding hostage from detention cells to house arrest in their quarters on the base.

The mutiny erupted Tuesday after Prime Minister Eric Williams declared a state of emergency in an attempt to check increasingly violent demonstrations by Black Power advocates and unemployed youths and workers. The mutineers claim they have a majority of the army on their side, but their actual numbers are not clear.

The mutineers were reported asking for amnesty for more than a score of Black Power leaders arrested under the state of emergency.

Loyal troops have ringed the base, sealing it off. But the rebels' possession of the armory, and with it the government's chief stock of weapons, put the government in a tight spot.

The United States flew down one planeload of small arms Wednesday night but a spokesman for the State Department said there were no plans for further deliveries.

Child's Pajamas Rated Fire Trap

LANSING (AP) — Rep. Richard Allen dropped a piece of flannel — the kind used in most children's pajamas — into a dish, touched it with a match and watched the material quickly turn to ashes.

He repeated the process, this time using a piece of material treated with nonflammable substances. The flannel charred, but did not burst into flames.

"Many children suffer greatly and unnecessarily from burns in Michigan every year," Allen, an Ithaca Republican said. "Recent developments make it possible to treat most types of cloth to render them practically nonflammable."

Allen introduced a bill Thursday requiring clothes for young children be made of nonflammable material. The measure provides for misdemeanor penalties for violation of the regulations, with a fine of up to $500 or a one-year prison sentence.

'Hold The Line' Is City Budget Goal

By CLINT DUNATHAN

The Escanaba City Council will recive from City Manager George Harvey a hold-the-line balanced budget for the coming fiscal year—although it is going to mean some cuts in certain municipal operations and particularly in capital improvements.

The city's fiscal year will begin July 1 and the 1970-71 general fund operating budget recommended by the manager will be $1,976,172.

This is $142,018 below the operating budget of 1969-70.

The grand total budget for the city—including municipal utilities of water, waste water, and electric—will be $4,050,467 for the coming year.

Salary Increases

The major reduction in the operating budget will bring a sizeable cut-back in capital improvements: Reduced from $320,000 to $179,598. This will be the lowest capital outlay program in many years, Harvey said.

Some budget costs have not been precisely determined as yet, the manager added. For instance, negotiations on salary are still under way and a final figure on personal services hasn't been definitely set.

But one thing is certain—there will be a salary increase for all city employes. Personal services represent about 50 cent of the operating budget.

Keeping expenditures in balance with income, as proposed in the manager's recommended budget, should be good news to Escanaba taxpayers, for it will mean no increase in the city tax rate.

Same Tax Rate

The rate will continue at $16.50 per $1,000 of the city's assessed valuation. This will bring revenue of $675,000 based on the valuation of $40,520,800—up to that figure from $38,983,750 last year.

The increase in valuation, indicating a growing community, will be helpful in bringing in additional revenues to meet the budget needs—but a growing community also means additional service costs.

The property tax is one of the major revenue sources (about one-third of the total) for the city, and the second is the municipal electric utility.

From the electric utility operation in the coming fiscal year the city expects to gain for its operating budget available profit of $345,000. In addition there will be paid to the city taxes charged against the utility for a total to the city of $404,000.

Population Factor

But revenues from the state—weight, gas, sales tax and so forth—are not so certain fo the coming fiscal year, for they are tied to a disbursement formula based on population, Harvey pointed out. Result of the 1970 census will not be known until the end of this year and will be applied retroactive to July 1, 1970.

"Our budget is based on a population of 16,000 and if the census shows we have less than that, we are going to lose, if it's more than that we will gain accordingly,' said the manager.

The anticipated state revenue to the city from all sources is $460,000—but that depends on the per capita situation.

There are other sources of revenue: $15,000 from Delta County for airport operation; $25,000 income from interest; $25,000 transferred from the parking meter fund; $70,000 from departmental revenues; $20,000 in revenues from building permits and other fees; $5,500 from the District Court; to name the major items.

Holding The Line

Budget cuts have been necessary to achieve a balanced budget, said Harvey.

Major cuts were in the capital outlay program; elimination in the manager's budget of $3,000 for an annual report calendar; and $25,000 from the city assessor for a professional reappraiser service.

Deleted also were $25,000 toward the purchase of a fire truck; elimination of the skiing program, reduction of personal service, and other economics to hold the recreation budget to $98,000 which includes the Civic Center operation.

The airport budget was up about $7,000 because of the higher standards for snow removal; and the budget includes $9,000 for resurfacing the north-south runway and $32,000 for site development west of the terminal.

Cut Six Positions

Escanaba Public Library requested $95,485 and this was reduced to $76,536, compared to a budget of $88,000 last year; street reconstruction in the amount of $40,000 was eliminated; four storm sewer projects totaling $185,000 were struck out.

Also a factor in general fund obligations is the need to subsidize the waste water utility in the amount of $85,000 since rates are not high enough to cover the waste water utility operating cost by that amount. This situation is to be corrected in the future with a new rate structure.

To bring the budget into balance, personal services got its share of reduction, the manager reported. A total of six positions are being eliminated, and this number includes four vacancies which will not be refilled. Of the four, one is in the police department and two are in the fire department.

In accordance with the city charter, the council met Thursday night to review city operations as proposed. The budget will be adopted after a public hearing to be held May 21.

Police Stress Safe Cycling

There are probably more kids riding bikes today than ever before and the responsibility of adults is to encourage them to ride safely, Escanaba Police Chief Richard Frederick said today.

His plea for safe riding of bikes on Escanaba streets is keyed to the observance of Bike Safety Week, in which Patrolman Ronald Kaltenbach has brought a message of safety to all of the schools in the city.

As the summer season approaches, more and more youngsters will be using bikes for fun, transportation and recreation. Motorists must share the road with them intelligently and courteously, and parents must make sure that they and their children live up to their own responsibilities, Police said.

Chief Frederick advised parents to instruct their children in safe bicycle driving techniques passed along from the Bicycle Institute of America.

Obey all traffic regulations, lights, stop signs, one-way streets.

Keep right. Ride single file. Don't weave in and out, swerve, race or stunt in traffic. Never hitch a ride on a truck or other vehicle.

For night riding, be sure to have a white light in front and a red light or state-approved reflector in the rear. Have a clear-sounding horn or bell to warn others of your approach.

Slow down at all intersections, look both ways, then proceed with caution.

Always give pedestrians the right of way.

Watch out for cars pulling into traffic or for doors opening.

Don't carry passengers or packages that interfere with your vision or control.

Always use proper hand signals for stopping and turning.

Delona Restaurant To Have New Owner

When the Delona Restaurant opens its doors for business on Tuesday, April 28, at its Bay View location, it will be under new ownership.

Frank Muse, a former resident of Grand Rapids, has purchased the restaurant from Andy and Edith Anderson. Muse is no stranger to this area though, as he has worked on the pipe line for the past five years. Mr. and Mrs. Anderson will remain in Escanaba for the summer months before moving to Florida.

Muse does not plan any changes at the Delona Restaurant at the present time. He plans to run the restaurant in the same manner in which the Andersons did and possible changes may be made in the future.

This will be Muse's first venture into the restaurant, although his parents owned one in lower Michigan. Muse's mother, Mrs. Thelma Muse, will be the head cook at the Delona. She has plenty of background as a cook, having worked in some of the fancier restaurants in the Grand Rapids area, including "Fingers."

Muse is single and plans to live right next door to the restaurant in a trailer house.

At their den meeting, each scout drew a poster about fighting pollution and these are displayed at the Soo Hill School.

Building Permits Are Required

The City Engineer's Office today reminded residents that under the Building Ordinance, permits are required for all building construction. The provisions of the Code apply to building construction, alterations, moving, demolition, and repair.

It is anticipated that in the future, occupancy permits will be issued on new construction, and a change in occupancy.

It is the responsibility of the owner or person having work done to see that the proper permits are obtained prior to work commencing. Certain documentation must accompany the application for a permit; requirements are on file in the City Inspector's Office. A nominal fee, based on the building size must be paid to the City of Escanaba for issuance of the permit. In those cases of nonstructural work or change, no fee is required for the permit.

All construction work for which a permit is required will be subject to inspection by the Building Inspectors.

Players Opening Is 'Something Special'

By DAVID LEE

Opening night of any show is always something special. The opening night of the Players de Noc production of John Van-Druten's "Bell, Book and Candle" was no exception Thursday.

The show deals with three 20th century witches. Love comes to one of the witches, Gillian Holroyd, played by Betty Donalds. The bad part is that she loves a mortal, Shepard Henderson, portrayed by Jim Bruce.

Naturally, Gillian has plenty of help in solving her problems from her Aunt Queenie, played beautifully by Coralie Puglisi, and from her brother Nicky Holroyd, who is played by Jim Moore. Another mortal enters the scene as a usually drunk author, Sidney Redlich, who is planning to write a book about witches, played by Richard Hanson.

Excels As Drunk

The first act of the production tended to drag at times, yet the audience never lost interest. The lines are quick and well delivered. The actors attempted to put all they had into their performance, especially Richard Hanson when he made his grand enterance as the drunken author.

It took this writer some time to decide if Hanson was actually drunk or just doing a fantastic job of acting. After a great deal of though, I believe it was just fine acting on his part.

The second act did seem to become a bit long, although, for production reasons, the second intermission had to be delayed until prior to the second scene of the third act. Although timewise this seemed long, the action on the stage kept the audience's attention.

In the final act, all of Gillian's problems come to an unusual end. The pace in this act is quick and the audience becomes quite envolved with the action.

Direction Excellent

Behind every good play you have a good director and "Bell, Book and Candle" is not an exception to the rule. Mrs. Glenn (Pat) Bergey has done an excellent job of bringing each individual character out of her cast. Mrs. Bergey has also done a magnificent job of producing a basically difficult show with non-professional actors.

The entire cast must be comended for a great performance. The audience can readily believe they have just seen three real witches, along with two well played mortals.

A special word of praise must go to the people backstage who did a beautiful job of designing and constructing a magnificent set.

For those who are still debating if they should see this performance, take this writer's advice and do not pass up this production. It will be an evening of enjoyment for all. The play continues at 8 p.m. today and Saturday at the Escanaba Area High School Auditorium.

Students Clean School Grounds

Students at Escanaba Area High School Thursday completed the first of two cleanup projects planned by the Student Council as part of a campaign to improve environmental quality.

About 400 students and teachers from the high school turned out to clean up the school grounds.

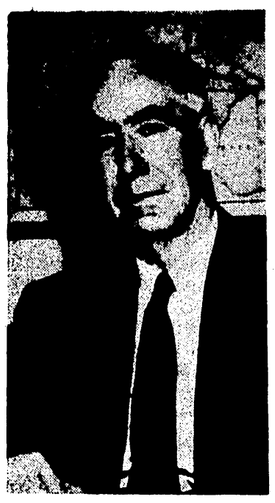

The cleanup effort was done in competition between the freshman, sophomore, junior and senior classes. High school custodians and Principal Robert Micensky judged the competition, awarding Esky's traditional "Little Brown Jug" to the freshman class for doing the most complete job.

The next student-sponsored "Mother Earth" project is scheduled Sunday when volunteers from Escanaba and Holy Name High Schools will meet at the north end of Ludington Park near the U. S. Coast Guard station at 1 p. m. to begin the spring cleanup of the park.

The month of "Mother Earth" activities organized by the Student Council began April 10 and will continue through May 9. Entries for the Delta County photo contest must be turned in at the PhotoArt Shop by May 9. A total of $250 in prizes donated by area merchants and unions will be awarded to winning entries.

May 9 is the official "Day In May" on which state-wide activities are being organized by Rep. David Serotkin of Mount Clemens to draw attention to environmental problems and the legislation under consideration in Lansing to deal with the problems. Escanaba Area High School is one of about 180 groups participating in the program.

He was born March 7, 1889 in Negaunee and had resided at 700 S. 10th St., Escanaba where the family home had been since 1940. His wife, Loretto M. Flynn, died in 1950.

Until his retirement in 1957 he was employed as roadmaster for the C&NW Railway and in earlier years was roadmaster in Fond du Lac, Wis. He also worked as foreman of crews who installed and repaired tracks throughout a large part of the Upper Peninsula including construction of tracks on the Escanaba ore docks.

Escanaba firemen answered a call at the Harnischfeger plant Thursday evening at 8:40. A fire which started in a defective LP gas evaporator caused damage to electrical wires and regulators and the firemen shut off the gas supply and let the fire burn itself out. Cause of the fire is unknown. The firemen were also called to several grass fires in the area Thursday, none of which resulted in any damage.

Four Injured In U.S. 2 Crash

Four persons were injured and two of them hospitalized as a result of a two-car accident Thursday on U.S. 2 near Nahma Junction.

Edward Hoeft, 51, of Sault Ste. Marie, driver of one of the vehicles, and his wife, Opal, were admitted to the St. Francis Hospital where they were reported in good condition today.

Also injured in the accident was Marlin Baverle, 43, of Riverview, Mich., driver of the other vehicle, and Martin Anent, 41, of Trenton, Mich., a passenger in the vehicle. Both men sought their own treatment, officers said.

State Police said the Baverle vehicle was towing a Jeep that started swaying heavily, causing Baverle to lose control of his vehicle, crossing over the center line, and colliding head-on with the Hoeft vehicle.

Officers said Baverle was ticketed for driving left of center.

Some State Road Restrictions Off

LANSING (AP) — The State Highway Department says spring weight restrictions on some 500 miles of seasonal state roads in southern Michigan will be eliminated today. Restrictions on seasonal state highways north of M 46 will continue until further notice, the department adds.

Environmental Quality Manager Named By Mead

Jerry L. Parr has been named manager of environmental quality at Mead's new Publishing Papers Center in Escanaba, announces Robert P. Arvold, vice president and general manager of the Escanaba Paper Co.

Parr has been active in the company's technical service efforts for eight years, and in this new assignment will assume full responsibility and authority for control and abatement of air and water pollution at the Escanaba mill. He will report directly to O. C. Christiansen, plant manager.

Parr's new job includes monitoring the performance of all pollution control equipment to assure peak efficiency of all facilities. He has been authorized to establish and maintain highly effective stream and air monitoring systems and to implement immediate corrective actions whenever effluents or emissions from the operation exceed established standards.

To Serve Community

His responsibility includes taking the necessary corrective steps, including determining the rate of operations to alleviate immediate problems.

In addition to keeping management advised on the technical aspects of all environmental matters, he will be the mill's community representative in this area.

"He may be called by anyone in the community wishing to discuss any matters of air and stream quality relating to our operations," Christiansen said.

"The new post and its authority were established to carry out Mead's desire and willingness to be a good corporate citizen with respect to environmental quality," said Arvold.

Although Parr will devote most of his time to efforts related to assuring clean air in the community, he will also have overall supervisory responsibility for the mill's vast waste water treatment facilities, the largest system of its kind in Northern Michigan. The company will have $8 million invested in this facility by late 1971 when the Publishing Papers Center is scheduled for completion.

Jerry L. Parr

Diligence Required

"From the beginning, consideration of environmental resources was an integral part of the construction planning for the new mill," said Arvold. "Design engineers have expressed confidence that the new pulp mill will not create an odor in the community. However, continual diligence is required to assure satisfactory operation and to minimize the possibility of power, equipment and human failures which can and do occur in the most efficiently-built and operated facilities.

"The Mead Corp. operates under a decentralized management philosophy which allows local management broad latitudes for action in operating decisions. However, it insists on compliance with established corporate policies; one of which is a very strict requirement governing air and water pollution control."

Activity Coordinated

Ultimate responsibility for environmental quality rests with Dr. George H. Sheets, executive vice president.

A committee under the leadership of the vice president of research and engineering coordinates the activity between corporate management and operating facilities. This provides local management with staff resources, counselling and alternate courses of action when they are necessary.

Parr will prepare the communications needed by the plant manager to alert and inform corporate offices of any environmental problems at Escanaba.

"With these provisions," said Arvold "Escanaba management can assure our company and the Escanaba community that immediate action will be taken if and when an environmental problem occurs at the mill."

Trans-Alaska Oil Pipeline Gets Hickel OK

JUNEAU, Alaska (AP) — Secretary of the Interior Walter J. Hickel, told a joint session of the Alaska legislature today construction of a trans-Alaska oil pipeline will not damage the environment.

"The construction authorizations will be given only after a thorough engineering and design analysis," Hickel said in a speech prepared for delivery today. "And I can guarantee that we will not approve any design based on the old and faulty concept of 'Build now, Repair later.'"

Conservationists who heard Hickel's announcement approving the pipeline's right of way Thursday were openly skeptical that the Interior Department had resolved questions about possible damage to the land and wildlife.

But Hickel, a former governor of Alaska, told legislators "our detailed examination of the pipeline specifications will continue to include review—by our wildlife experts—to insure that migratory patterns, such as those of the caribou are not seriously disturbed."

The oil pipeline will stretch 800 miles across the arctic Alaskan tundra. The right-of-way permit is for construction of an access road along 390 miles of the line from the Yukon River to Prudhoe Bay. The entire line will connect the oil rich North Slope on Prudhoe Bay to Valdez.

Hickel repeated his plan to issue the permit once the involved parties reach agreement and all legal requirements are met. But he made no reference to a recent federal court order barring the permit until conservation groups can air their complaints against it.

Conservationists are fearful the road and pipe will serve as an unnatural barrier to wandering wildlife, cutting off their migratory patterns.

Trans-Alaska Oil Pipeline Gets Hickel OK

JUNEAU, Alaska (AP) — Secretary of the Interior Walter J. Hickel, told a joint session of the Alaska legislature today construction of a trans-Alaska oil pipeline will not damage the environment.

"The construction authorizations will be given only after a thorough engineering and design analysis," Hickel said in a speech prepared for delivery today. "And I can guarantee that we will not approve any design based on the old and faulty concept of 'Build now, Repair later.'"

Conservationists who heard Hickel's announcement approving the pipeline's right of way Thursday were openly skeptical that the Interior Department had resolved questions about possible damage to the land and wildlife.

But Hickel, a former governor of Alaska, told legislators "our detailed examination of the pipeline specifications will continue to include review—by our wildlife experts—to insure that migratory patterns, such as those of the caribou are not seriously disturbed."

The oil pipeline will stretch 800 miles across the arctic Alaskan tundra. The right-of-way permit is for construction of an access road along 390 miles of the line from the Yukon River to Prudhoe Bay. The entire line will connect the oil rich North Slope on Prudhoe Bay to Valdez.

Hickel repeated his plan to issue the permit once the involved parties reach agreement and all legal requirements are met. But he made no reference to a recent federal court order barring the permit until conservation groups can air their complaints against it.

Conservationists are fearful the road and pipe will serve as an unnatural barrier to wandering wildlife, cutting off their migratory patterns.

Welfare Reform

President Nixon's sweeping innovations in welfare programs were given a big boost when the House passed the reform package by a vote of 243 to 155. The measure now is in the Senate, where passage is expected, although probably with several modifications.

As the plan went to the House, it called for a family assistance program for the working poor as well as for present welfare recipients that would provide a minimum annual income of $1,600 for a family of four. Attempts will be made in the Senate to increase this assured floor, which is the provision that has caused the measure to become known as the guaranteed annual income plan, although the Nixon administration shudders at that designation and prefers to refer to the program euphemistically as the family assistance plan.

States which choose to pay more than the minimum income would receive federal assistance of 30 per cent of the extra payments, up to the officially determined poverty level. Welfare payments would not be reduced because of earnings up to $60 a month; thereafter, the payment would be cut $1 for each $2 earned.

The plan thus has built-in work incentives. Carrying this a step further, the plan requires adults in assisted families, except mothers with pre-school children, to register for training and job assignment. A new training and unemployment program would be provided under the U. S. Department of Labor working through state employment offices. Mothers with pre-school children would be encouraged to take job training through the establishment of federally financed day care centers.

Opponents of the bill protest that its enactment would launch the federal government into a revolutionary new program guaranteeing all families a minimum income, even those in which the father already is employed. Although the official estimate is that the bill would cost $4.4 billion annually, opponents claim the actual cost will turn out to be far higher than that. A proposal in the Senate provides for $3,600 minimum for a family of four, which would cost about $20 billion annually.

Up to now, the United States has never endorsed the idea that the government should pay welfare to those who have jobs. If that principle is established in law, opponents of the guaranteed annual income plan maintain, the lone destinction between those who pay taxes and those who claim them will be some arbitrary, government decreed income level. And as this level is raised, year after year, proportionately fewer and fewer people would be paying higher taxes to support more and more welfare recipients.

The principal objection of those opposed to the plan overlooks the fact that an awful lot of people who have jobs now nevertheless are poor. This, in fact, is one of the major criticisms of the present welfare system — that it is far too limited in its coverage. Only 40 per cent of the poor population benefits from public assistance programs now, according to a report by the Committee for Economic Development (CED), a non-profit, non-partisan and non-political body that has conducted an exhaustive study of the public welfare system. The main group excluded under the present system of categorical assistance is the working poor who do not earn enough to escape from poverty.

This is not the only major indictment against the present welfare system, which is almost universally deplored for its inefficiency, inequities and abuses.

The present system also fails to offer public assistance benefits sufficient to provide a decent living for most of the recipients. The disincentives and enequities built into the existing system tend to perpetuate the very poverty that it is intended to alleviate and to encourage continued dependence on welfare. CED found wide variations in state public assistance payments and welfare services exist under the present system, which "has placed unfair and onerous financial burdens on some states and communities."

The Nixon administration's family assistance plan may not be the perfect answer to our present welfare mess, but it is a long overdue recognition that something must be done to alleviate the situation. If enacted, it will give this nation a far-reaching welfare reform program that has progressive features that are lacking in the antiquated system we hve employed for far too long.

Should U.S. Abandon The Federal Republic?

By JOHN CHAMBERLAIN

The bill calling for a Constitutional Amendment that would abolish the Electoral College and provide for a direct popular vote for President is before the Senate Judiciary Committee, where it may or may not get enough second thoughts to throw it out entirely.

But at least it is being debated in sober fashion, and the chances seem very good that the House version, which would change our traditional federal republic into a raw democracy, will be modified to some extent before the Senate as a whole votes on it in May.

Curiously enough, the impulse to defend our present system, or at least to water down the House bill, has received a number of favorable prods from bona fide card-carrying liberals who, ordinarily, would rather be caught dead than be found hobnobbing with constitutional conservatives.

Richard Goodwin, a former adviser to Presidents Kennedy and Johnson, is one liberal who defends the electoral system. Teddy White, the author of all those books about the making of various Presidents, is another. And a liberal Yale Law School professor, Alexander Bickel, who writes for the New Republic, is a third.

The most surprising thing is to find Goodwin, who has been associated with the so-called "new politics," speaking in the accents of an Edmund Burke in defense of the constitutional status quo. Says Goodwin:

"We have never before amended the Constitution in anticipation of possible abuse or on the basis of abstract theory. Only after an abuse has manifested itself, and usually after considerable public pressure, have we acted . . . Surely this is one of the reasons why the American Constitution has endured while more volatile republics rose and fell."

* * *

The virtue of the electoral system is that it gives the small state a "non-population based bonus" in the electoral college, where the number of a State's Senators is added to the number of its Representatives to determine its total vote.

This means that small or sparsely settled states, such as Delaware or Nevada, have an added increment of defense against being overborne by populous New York or California. We get sound regional representation by the system of letting the Presidential vote be called by state units (with a bonus for the weaker states) instead of the raw popular vote, which would give the practiced vote thieves in some of our more squalid urban areas the opportunity to steal a close election.

It is the possible vote-thievery aspect that particularly bothers Teddy White, who knows from his experienced reporting that "the mores and morality of vote-counting vary from state to state." There are states in the union, says White, "where votes are bought, paid for and, in all too many cases, counted, manipulated and miscounted by thieves."

* * *

Under the present dispensation third parties have little opportunity to get a solid national foothold. This saves us from the unstable multi-party fate of the French Third Republic.

Most people have the mother-wit to know that a third party vote tends to throw any given state's electoral count to the candidate who, from the third party man's point of view, would make the least desirable President. A departure from the winner-take-all electoral vote system in the separate states would encourage the creation of third, fourth, and fifth national parties. They could always hope to win by as little as 40 per cent of the vote or to force a runoff in which they could bargain for the balance-of-power position.

Because of the second thoughts instigated by the liberals themselves, the conservative constitutionalists have taken new heart.

The plan offered by Sen. Ervin, North Carolina's eminent constitutionalist, would keep the Elecoral College but bind the elecaors to abide by their states' decisions. Ervin would settle a deadlocked election by letting every member of the House of Representatives and every Senator have one vote each in choosing between the two top candidates.

The liberals have other substitute bills that are supported by Tydings, Cook, and Byrd of West Virginia.

Birch Bayh may not have clear sailing for his bill, which would abolish the federal republic in favor of a unitary democracy that might make Mayor Daley of Chicago our kingmaker.

Dollar For Kisses May Be Ill Spent

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP) — Unforgettable moments of a lifetime:

Paying a dollar for a kiss at a church social and realizing later that you could have got a greater value for your money by buying four good cigars.

Climbing the Great Pyramid near Cairo and feeling, as the dawn illuminated the desert, as if you were astride the rooftop of the world—and could, by stretching out your hand, touch the cheek of Deity.

Opening one of those window-paned envelopes from the Internal Revenue Service and finding an unexpected check from a favorite uncle.

The disappointing first taste of two things you'd always thought would be more wonderful—caviar and pomegrantates.

Watching a topless maiden in Bali climb a hill with a jar of water on her head, sinuous as a panther.

Listening to Gen. Omar Nelson Bradley, patient as a friendly schoolteacher, brief a group of war correspondents in Normandy.

Getting a "Dear John" letter from a college sweetheart who had promised to wait forever but soon decided forever lasted too long.

Being impressed by the Schizophrenic face of Field Marshal Herman Goering at the Nuremberg trials—benevolent looking as a Dutch uncle in full view but satanic in profile.

The paralyzing sight of a schoolmate in a coffin, first of his class to be confined in moveless silence.

Hearing the sound of opportunity knocking on your door but feeling just too darned humanly lazy to get up and open it.

Taking an egg, warm to the hand, from the nest of a squawking hen.

Falling off a horse you were trying to ride bareback.

Being kicked by a cow, indignant because you tried to milk her from the wrong side.

Hurting your funny bone and wondering why they call it that since you didn't exactly feel like laughing.

Trying to creep soundlessly up the stairs to bed the first time in your life you stayed out after midnight.

Landing a job on your own and bragging to your father, "Oh Dad, I'll never need help from you again,"—and then hitting him up for two bucks the very next week.

Lying in a ditch in Tunisia under bombardment and trying to claw your way through the earth to China—or anywhere but there.

Breaking an arm and dazedly seeing it dangle beyond control.

Asking God for something you knew you didn't deserve—and then feeling vaguely frightened when it was granted to you after all.

Fight Likely On Space Funds

WASHINGTON (AP) — A fight over funds for the space shuttle and station loomed today as the House called up a $3.6 billion authorization bill for the nation's space program.

"This is the start of the manned Mars landing program," Rep. Joseph E. Karth, D-Minn., said of the $190 million programmed for the shuttle. "It is too early to go into this."

The space shuttle program, envisioned for the last half of the decade, is designed to ferry men and materials to and from an earth-orbiting space station.

The spending ceiling for the program is included in the over-all bill which the House Science and Astronautics Committee increased about $300 million over President Nixon's budget. The boost was parceled out to the Apollo program and space flight operations.

But Karth, chairman of a House space science and applications subcommittee, said the National Aeronautics and Space Administration has acknowledged about $70 million for the shuttle would be available through its office of advanced research and technology if the $190 million is eliminated.

Karth said NASA has proposed $100 million for manned planetary exploration in fiscal 1977, $300 billion the next year and $1 billion in fiscal 1979. This, he said, has to involve Mars.

But Karth argued that large-scale expenditures on the space shuttle should be deferred until research can be done on the "many technical problems that must be resolved before hardware development can be undertaken effectively."

♠ A K 3 ♥ A 10 8 ♦ Q 3 ♣ A 10 8 7 2	N W E S

1. You are declarer with the West hand at Three Notrump and North leads the queen of spades. If you play correctly, you can be sure of the contract regardless of how the adverse cards are divided. How would you play the hand?

	♠ Q J 7 4 3 ♥ A 5 ♦ A K 7 ♣ A Q 2
♠ A 9 8 2 ♥ K 6 ♦ Q 9 8 2 ♣ K 8 4	N W E S

2. You are declarer with the West hand at Six Spades. North leads the queen of hearts. How would you play the hand?

1. Win the spade with the king and play a low diamond from dummy, finessing the ten. If North wins with the jack, you have nine tricks consisting of five diamonds, two spades, a heart and a club.

If the ten of diamonds wins the trick, you can be equally sure of making the contract by returning a low diamond to dummy's queen and continuing with the ace and another heart. This method of play guarantees two spade tricks, two hearts, a club and at least four diamonds. The unusual diamond finesse at trick two is a safety measure to guard against every possible division of the diamonds—whether they are split 3-2, 4-1, or 5-0.

2. It is clear that the only practical danger is that one opponent has all the missing trumps. All thoughts should therefore be concentrated on guarding against this possibility.

There is only one method of play that will guard against four trumps in either opponent's hand, and that is by starting the trumps with a low one from dummy.

Accordingly, you win the opening heart lead with the king and lead the deuce of spades. If South has all the trumps, he makes only one trump trick regardless of what he does, and the same is true if North has all the trumps.

If you were to start the trumps by first leading the queen from your hand, you would go down if it turned out that South had the K-10-8-6, while if you started the trumps by first leading the ace from dummy, you would go down if it developed that North had the four missing trumps. The lead of the deuce at trick two is the only way to assure the contract.

DOLLAR MISSING

To whoever stole my silver dollar, I hope that you're real proud of yourself because in my eyes you have to be pretty low to steal from someone's collection. If you needed money that badly, I'm sure I could have given you a few dollars.

For those of you who don't know about this, here's what happened: I put my coin collection in the Gladstone Hobby Fair held last Saturday from 3 to 9 p. m. I started out with seven silver dollars and came home with six.

For me and a lot of other people, you have to be pretty low to do something like this.

Apologies Accepted On Arthritis Error

Dear Ann Landers: Do you think you can tear yourself away from the sex perverts and other assorted kooks long enough to answer a sensible question?

Several months ago you wrote a column about venereal disease. You made the statement that gonorrhea caused (among other things) arthritis.

I've read a great deal about arthritis and have never seen such a statement. In fact, the doctors with whom I have discussed this ailment say no cure for arthritis can be found because the cause is not known. I think you owe it to every person who has arthritis to retract that damaging statement or identify your authority. Get with it, Ann, or retire.—Memphis

Dear Memphis: I did indeed make the statement that gonorrhea can cause, among other things, arthritis. My authorities are Dr. John Najarian, Professor and Chairman of the Department of Surgery, University of Minnesota and Dr. Robert Stolar, Associate Professor of Medicine at Georgetown School of Medicine and Professor at Howard Medical School in Washington, D. C.

Arthritis is an inflammation of the joints. The vast majority of arthitics have either rheumatoid or osteoarthritis. In some cases the cause for the inflammation is not known. In gonorrheal arthritis, however, the cause IS known because the bacteria has been isolated and identified. Your apologies are accepted.

Dear Ann Landers: After 12 years of what I thought was a good marriage, my husband began to lose interest in me. I blamed Mike's long hours, financial pressures, everything under the sun. Finally I asked him if there was another woman. He said, "No."

Mike's boss has always treated him like a son and me like a daughter. I decided to confide in him. I don't know what possessed me but on a wild hunch I asked him if "the other woman" could be Mike's problem. He said, "Yes—it's very possible." Then he began to speak freely, assuming I knew all about it. The "other woman," it turns out, is the boss's wife. I nearly passed out.

Her reputation is not good. This isn't the first time she's been involved with a man at the plant. (She works there.) It's the first time my husband has been involved with another woman, however, and I don't know what to do. The boss does not want to fire Mike. He's sure the affair will end before long and advised me to keep quiet and keep the light in the window. What do you say?—Unhappy

Dear Unhappy: Mike's boss gave you good advice. In addition to the light in the window, dearie, keep a fire in the furnace.

Dear Ann Landers: I am pregnant with our third child. Just barely. Like, would you believe, six weeks. The doctor verified it yesterday. This morning I received three phone calls congratulating me. My big mouth husband made the announcement at his office. I am burning. He says it makes no difference when the news is told. Lay him out in your own inimitable style, Ann.—Frothing

Dear Froth: Of course it makes no difference—to HIM. Nobody asks the husband, "When already?" because it seems to them that you've been pregnant for thirteen months.

Since pregnancy is the woman's condition it should be her announcement. The husband should keep his lip zipped until she can no longer zip her skirt.

A proposal in the Senate provides for $3,600 minimum for a family of four, which would cost about $20 billion annually.

Up to now, the United States has never endorsed the idea that the government should pay welfare to those who have jobs. If that principle is established in law, opponents of the guaranteed annual income plan maintain, the lone destinction between those who pay taxes and those who claim them will be some arbitrary, government decreed income level. And as this level is raised, year after year, proportionately fewer and fewer people would be paying higher taxes to support more and more welfare recipients.

The principal objection of those opposed to the plan overlooks the fact that an awful lot of people who have jobs now nevertheless are poor. This, in fact, is one of the major criticisms of the present welfare system — that it is far too limited in its coverage. Only 40 per cent of the poor population benefits from public assistance programs now, according to a report by the Committee for Economic Development (CED), a nonprofit, non-partisan and non-political body that has conducted an exhaustive study of the public welfare system. The main group excluded under the present system of categorical assistance is the working poor who do not earn enough to escape from poverty.

This is not the only major indictment against the present welfare system, which is almost universally deplored for its inefficiency, inequities and abuses.

The present system also fails to offer public assistance benefits sufficient to provide a decent living for most of the recipients. The disincentives and enequities built into the existing system tend to perpetuate the very poverty that it is intended to alleviate and to encourage continued dependence on welfare. CED found wide variations in state public assistance payments and welfare services exist under the present system, which "has placed unfair and onerous financial burdens on some states and communities."

The Nixon administration's family assistance plan may not be the perfect answer to our present welfare mess, but it is a long overdue recognition that something must be done to alleviate the situation. If enacted, it will give this nation a far-reaching welfare reform program that has progressive features that are lacking in the antiquated system we hve employed for far too long.

Should U.S. Abandon The Federal Republic?

By JOHN CHAMBERLAIN

The bill calling for a Constitutional Amendment that would abolish the Electoral College and provide for a direct popular vote for President is before the Senate Judiciary Committee, where it may or may not get enough second thoughts to throw it out entirely.

But at least it is being debated in sober fashion, and the chances seem very good that the House version, which would change our traditional federal republic into a raw democracy, will be modified to some extent before the Senate as a whole votes on it in May.

Curiously enough, the impulse to defend our present system, or at least to water down the House bill, has received a number of favorable prods from bona fide card-carrying liberals who, ordinarily, would rather be caught dead than be found hobnobbing with constitutional conservatives.

Richard Goodwin, a former adviser to Presidents Kennedy and Johnson, is one liberal who defends the electoral system. Teddy White, the author of all those books about the making of various Presidents, is another. And a liberal Yale Law School professor, Alexander Bickel, who writes for the New Republic, is a third.

The most surprising thing is to find Goodwin, who has been associated with the so-called "new politics," speaking in the accents of an Edmund Burke in defense of the constitutional status quo. Says Goodwin:

"We have never before amended the Constitution in anticipation of possible abuse or on the basis of abstract theory. Only after an abuse has manifested itself, and usually after considerable public pressure, have we acted . . . Surely this is one of the reasons why the American Constitution has endured while more volatile republics rose and fell."

The virtue of the electoral system is that it gives the small state a "non-population based bonus" in the electoral college, where the number of a State's Senators is added to the number of its Representatives to determine its total vote.

This means that small or sparsely settled states, such as Delaware or Nevada, have an added increment of defense against being overborne by populous New York or California. We get sound regional representation by the system of letting the Presidential vote be called by state units (with a bonus for the weaker states) instead of the raw popular vote, which would give the practiced vote thieves in some of our more squalid urban areas the opportunity to steal a close election.

It is the possible vote-thievery aspect that particularly bothers Teddy White, who knows from his experienced reporting that "the mores and morality of vote-counting vary from state to state." There are states in the union, says White, "where votes are bought, paid for and, in all too many cases, counted, manipulated and miscounted by thieves."

Under the present dispensation third parties have little opportunity to get a solid national foothold. This saves us from the unstable multi-party fate of the French Third Republic.

Most people have the mother-wit to know that a third party vote tends to throw any given state's electoral count to the candidate who, from the third party man's point of view, would make the least desirable President. A departure from the winner-take-all electoral vote system in the separate states would encourage the creation of third, fourth, and fifth national parties. They could always hope to win by as little as 40 per cent of the vote or to force a runoff in which they could bargain for the balance-of-power position.

Because of the second thoughts instigated by the liberals themselves, the conservative constitutionalists have taken new heart.

The plan offered by Sen. Ervin, North Carolina's eminent constitutionalist, would keep the Elecoral College but bind the elecaors to abide by their states' decisions. Ervin would settle a deadlocked election by letting every member of the House of Representatives and every Senator have one vote each in choosing between the two top candidates.

The liberals have other substitute bills that are supported by Tydings, Cook, and Byrd of West Virginia.

Birch Bayh may not have clear sailing for his bill, which would abolish the federal republic in favor of a unitary democracy that might make Mayor Daley of Chicago our kingmaker.

Dollar For Kisses May Be Ill Spent

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP) — Unforgettable moments of a lifetime:

Paying a dollar for a kiss at a church social and realizing later that you could have got a greater value for your money by buying four good cigars.

Climbing the Great Pyramid near Cairo and feeling, as the dawn illuminated the desert, as if you were astride the rooftop of the world—and could, by stretching out your hand, touch the cheek of Deity.

Opening one of those window-paned envelopes from the Internal Revenue Service and finding an unexpected check from a favorite uncle.

The disappointing first taste of two things you'd always thought would be more wonderful—caviar and pomegrantates.

Watching a topless maiden in Bali climb a hill with a jar of water on her head, sinuous as a panther.

Listening to Gen. Omar Nelson Bradley, patient as a friendly schoolteacher, brief a group of war correspondents in Normandy.

Getting a "Dear John" letter from a college sweetheart who had promised to wait forever but soon decided forever lasted too long.

Being impressed by the Schizophrenic face of Field Marshal Herman Goering at the Nuremberg trials—benevolent looking as a Dutch uncle in full view but satanic in profile.

The paralyzing sight of a schoolmate in a coffin, first of his class to be confined in moveless silence.

Hearing the sound of opportunity knocking on your door but feeling just too darned humanly lazy to get up and open it.

Taking an egg, warm to the hand, from the nest of a squawking hen.

Falling off a horse you were trying to ride bareback.

Being kicked by a cow, indignant because you tried to milk her from the wrong side.

Hurting your funny bone and wondering why they call it that since you didn't exactly feel like laughing.

Trying to creep soundlessly up the stairs to bed the first time in your life you stayed out after midnight.

Landing a job on your own and bragging to your father, "Oh Dad, I'll never need help from you again,"—and then hitting him up for two bucks the very next week.

Lying in a ditch in Tunisia under bombardment and trying to claw your way through the earth to China—or anywhere but there.

Breaking an arm and dazedly seeing it dangle beyond control.

Asking God for something you knew you didn't deserve—and then feeling vaguely frightened when it was granted to you after all.

Fight Likely On Space Funds

WASHINGTON (AP) — A fight over funds for the space shuttle and station loomed today as the House called up a $3.6 billion authorization bill for the nation's space program.

"This is the start of the manned Mars landing program," Rep. Joseph E. Karth, D-Minn., said of the $190 million programmed for the shuttle. "It is too early to go into this."

The space shuttle program, envisioned for the last half of the decade, is designed to ferry men and materials to and from an earth-orbiting space station.

The spending ceiling for the program is included in the over-all bill which the House Science and Astronautics Committee increased about $300 million over President Nixon's budget. The boost was parceled out to the Apollo program and space flight operations.

But Karth, chairman of a House space science and applications subcommittee, said the National Aeronautics and Space Administration has acknowledged about $70 million for the shuttle would be available through its office of advanced research and technology if the $190 million is eliminated.

Karth said NASA has proposed $100 million for manned planetary exploration in fiscal 1977, $300 billion the next year and $1 billion in fiscal 1979. This, he said, has to involve Mars.

But Karth argued that large-scale expenditures on the space shuttle should be deferred until research can be done on the "many technical problems that must be resolved before hardware development can be undertaken effectively."

Contract Bridge

TEST YOUR PLAY

♠ 7 6 ♥ Q J 2 ♦ A K 10 9 8 6 ♣ 9 4	N W E S	♠ A K 3 ♥ A 10 3 ♦ Q 3 ♣ A 10 8 7 2

1. You are declarer with the West hand at Three Notrump and North leads the queen of spades. If you play correctly, you can be sure of the contract regardless of how the adverse cards are divided. How would you play the hand?

♠ Q J 7 4 3 ♥ A 5 ♦ A K 7 ♣ A Q 2	N W E S	♠ A 9 5 2 ♥ K 6 ♦ Q 9 3 2 ♣ K 8 4

2. You are declarer with the West hand at Six Spades. North leads the queen of hearts. How would you play the hand?

1. Win the spade with the king and play a low diamond from dummy, finessing the ten. If North wins with the jack, you have nine tricks consisting of five diamonds, two spades, a heart and a club.

If the ten of diamonds wins the trick, you can be equally sure of making the contract by returning a low diamond to dummy's queen and continuing with the ace and another heart. This method of play guarantees two spade tricks, two hearts, a club and at least four diamonds. The unusual diamond finesse at trick two is a safety measure to guard against every possible division of the diamonds—whether they are split 3-2, 4-1, or 5-0.

2. It is clear that the only practical danger is that one opponent has all the missing trumps. All thoughts should therefore be concentrated on guarding against this possibility.

There is only one method of play that will guard against four trumps in either opponent's hand, and that is by starting the trumps with a low one from dummy.

Accordingly, you win the opening heart lead with the king and lead the deuce of spades. If South has all the trumps, he makes only one trump trick regardless of what he does, and the same is true if North has all the trumps.

If you were to start the trumps by first leading the queen from your hand, you would go down if it turned out that South had the K-10-8-6, while if you started the trumps by first leading the ace from dummy, you would go down if it developed that North had the four missing trumps. The lead of the deuce at trick two is the only way to assure the contract.

DOLLAR MISSING

To whoever stole my silver dollar, I hope that you're real proud of yourself because in my eyes you have to be pretty low to steal from someone's collection. If you needed money that badly, I'm sure I could have given you a few dollars.

For those of you who don't know about this, here's what happened: I put my coin collection in the Gladstone Hobby Fair held last Saturday from 3 to 9 p. m. I started out with seven silver dollars and came home with six.

For me and a lot of other people, you have to be pretty low to do something like this.

Apologies Accepted On Arthritis Error

Dear Ann Landers: Do you think you can tear yourself away from the sex perverts and other assorted kooks long enough to answer a sensible question?

Several months ago you wrote a column about venereal disease. You made the statement that gonorrhea caused (among other things) arthritis.

I've read a great deal about arthritis and have never seen such a statement. In fact, the doctors with whom I have discussed this ailment say no cure for arthritis can be found because the cause is not known. I think you owe it to every person who has arthritis to retract that damaging statement or identify your authority. Get with it, Ann, or retire.—Memphis

Dear Memphis: I did indeed make the statement that gonorrhea can cause, among other things, arthritis. My authorities are Dr. John Najarian, Professor and Chairman of the Department of Surgery, University of Minnesota and Dr. Robert Stolar, Associate Professor of Medicine at Georgetown School of Medicine and Professor at Howard Medical School in Washington, D. C.

Arthritis is an inflammation of the joints. The vast majority of arthitics have either rheumatoid or osteoarthritis. In some cases the cause for the inflammation is not known. In gonorrheal arthritis, however, the cause IS known because the bacteria has been isolated and identified. Your apologies are accepted.

Dear Ann Landers: After 12 years of what I thought was a good marriage, my husband began to lose interest in me. I blamed Mike's long hours, financial pressures, everything under the sun. Finally I asked him if there was another woman. He said, "No."

Mike's boss has always treated him like a son and me like a daughter. I decided to confide in him. I don't know what possessed me but on a wild hunch I asked him if "the other woman" could be Mike's problem. He said, "Yes—it's very possible." Then he began to speak freely, assuming I knew all about it. The "other woman," it turns out, is the boss's wife. I nearly passed out.

Her reputation is not good. This isn't the first time she's been involved with a man at the plant. (She works there.) It's the first time my husband has been involved with another woman, however, and I don't know what to do. The boss does not want to fire Mike. He's sure the affair will end before long and advised me to keep quiet and keep the light in the window. What do you say?—Unhappy

Dear Unhappy: Mike's boss gave you good advice. In addition to the light in the window, dearie, keep a fire in the furnace.

Dear Ann Landers: I am pregnant with our third child. Just barely. Like, would you believe, six weeks. The doctor verified it yesterday. This morning I received three phone calls congratulating me. My big mouth husband made the announcement at his office. I am burning. He says it makes no difference when the news is told. Lay him out in your own inimitable style, Ann.—Frothing

Dear Froth: Of course it makes no difference—to HIM. Nobody asks the husband, "When already?" because it seems to them that you've been pregnant for thirteen months.

Since pregnancy is the woman's condition it should be her announcement. The husband should keep his lip zipped until she can no longer zip her skirt.

"As we look back on the entire year, we can count many, many blessings. Probably the greatest was the privilege of having many visitors from the States and the Virgin Islands with us while the construction of the hospital was going on. Plumbers, electricians, contractors, architects, Methodists, Lutherans, Catholics, Moravians all lived with us here in our own home."

The construction of the new wing to the hospital was made through great ecumenicity.

Dr. Haupert has stated that he has not done missionary work for purely humanitarian reasons but to exemplify Christianity as a way of life. The purpose is the whole person, to try to meet their needs through education and medicine. It also includes trying to meet their spiritual needs through a daily working demonstration of the Christian way of life.

On Nov. 7, 1969, Dr. Haupert had the opportunity to meet his Excellency President Anatasio Somoza and his wife who came to Bilwaskarma for the dedication of the new hospital.

For the past 18 months Dr. Haupert has been in charge of Thaeler Memorial Hospital at the Moravian Mission in Bilwaskarma, Nicaragua. This 50-bed institution has recently been increased through the construction of a new unit.

Dr. Haupert recently writes in a letter:

"As we look back on the entire year, we can count many, many blessings. Probably the greatest was the privilege of having many visitors from the States and the Virgin Islands with us while the construction of the hospital was going on. Plumbers, electricians, contractors, architects, Methodists, Lutherans, Catholics, Moravians all lived with us here in our own home."

The construction of the new wing to the hospital was made through great ecumenicity.

Dr. Haupert has stated that he has not done missionary work for purely humanitarian reasons but to exemplify Christianity as a way of life. The purpose is the whole person, to try to meet their needs through education and medicine. It also includes trying to meet their spiritual needs through a daily working demonstration of the Christian way of life.

On Nov. 7, 1969, Dr. Haupert had the opportunity to meet his Excellency President Anatasio Somoza and his wife who came to Bilwaskarma for the dedication of the new hospital.

Dr. Haupert will relate the great fire, the new hospital work and missionary work being done in Nicaragua through slides. Dr. Haupet's family includes his wife, Joan, and their three children, David, Deborah and Jim. Dr. Haupert was formerly employed by the Daggett Medical Clinic.

Oklahoma Firm Names Williams

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla. — Appointment of Jack P. Williams of Escanaba as manager of manufacturing of Black, Sivalls and Bryson, Inc., was announced today by Richard E. Blohm, president of the corporation.

Black, Sivalls and Bryson is a wholly-owned subsidiary of International Systems & Control Corp. which has corporate headquarters at Houston, Tex.

Williams, who will work out of the Oklahoma City main offices of Black, Sivalls and Bryson, will be responsible for manufacturing facilities at Oklahoma City, Odessa, Tex., and Casper, Wyo. Each of the plants produces oil field equipment.

In addition to his responsibilities for manufacturing, Williams also will have responsibilities for production control, material control and industrial engineering departments.

In making the announcement, Blohm said the company is looking forward to having Williams' managerial abilities and industrial expertise in strengthening the firm. Williams has been manager of the Harnischfeger Corp. electrical products division in Escanaba.

He will take over his new assignment May 4.

Williams, who resides at Ford River, came to Escanaba in 1950 and has been active in community and church affairs.

He was a member of the Board of Education in Escanaba for eight years, served as Delta County Chairman of Michigan Week and has been active with the Escanaba Chamber of Commerce. He also was a member of the Escanaba Kiwanis Club for many years and is a member of Delta Lodge 195, F&AM.

He is presently lay leader for Central United Methodist Church, a member of the District Board of Missions and of the administrative board of the church and is vice president of the Council of Ministries.

Professionally, he is a member of the American Welding Society and of the American Management Association.

Williams was born at Portsmouth, Ohio, in 1917 and studied industrial management and labor relations at Ohio University Extension. Prior to joining Harnischfeger Corp., he was employed by utility and metal companies. During World War II he served as an instructor at Fort Belvoir, Va.

Genetic Program May Be Answer To Retardation

women to abdominal X-rays can increase the risk of producing Mongoloid children—possibly by eight-fold compared with non-irradiated women—and the older the woman when irradiated, the greater the risk.

Most Common Form

Mongolism, which ordinarily occurs in one of every 600 to 1,000 children born, is the most common recognizable form of mental retardation.

3. Reported advances in detecting, in the general population, unknowing carriers of the most common form of muscular dystrophy; and some lesser progress toward detecting carriers of cystic fibrosis.

4. Growing evidence that the cause of many of mankind's most common cancers—such as malignancies of the breast, colon, stomach, and the lining of the womb—appear to be under genetic influence to a certain extent.

5. An implied challenge by Dr. John Money a psychologist of the Johns Hopkins University, to any view—scientific or popular—that a male child carrying the recently widely publicized aberrant chromosome combination, called "XYY," is inexorably headed for a criminal life.

Money said further studies need to be made before conclusions can be drawn.

Specialist Reports

On another subject, Dr. Carl M. Pearson of the University of California at Los Angeles Center for Health Sciences, and a specialist on muscular dystrophy, reported that:

Recent advances in the use of certain enzyme and other tests now make it possible to detect up to 90 per cent of those women who are unknowing carriers of the defective chromosome that can result in the "Duchene" type of muscular dystrophy, the commonest form, and the type that exclusively affects males. Females act as carriers.

Asserting that a woman who has had one son afflicted with the disease has a one-in-two chance of having another, Pearson said the new ability to detect most female carriers of the trait "provides a great opportunity for genetic counselling—and for encouraging such women not to have children because of the risk of passing on the disease (to a son)—and of passing on the carrier trait to at least one-half of their daughters."

Professor Disagrees

Dr. M. Neil Macintyre, an anatomy professor from Case University School of Medicine, Cleveeland, said he disagreed with Pearson—and with anyone else holding similar views about specifically recommending against having children because of possible genetic risks.

"Genetic counselling still is not an exact science," he said. "I'm definitely opposed to urging any couple not to have children—or to have them."

He said that, in general, the couple should be informed of the known facts about possible risks, but "you should try not to let your personal bias become evident . . . Leave it up to them."

Against Abortion

He also said he opposes "destroying a child"—through therapeutic abortion—"only on the basis of the child being a carrier" of some genetic disease, as determined by tests while the unborn child is still a developing embryo.

Parents whose first-born may have been deformed or defective should be given another chance to produce a normal child, Macintyre said.

Asked by a doctor, "isn't adoption a reasonable procedure in some cases?" Macintyre replied:

"We leave it up to them . . . it doesn't have to be no children at all—or adoption."

Reports On Results

In this connection, Macintyre reported on results of 47 cases of "very high risk" pregnancies —from the standpoint of adverse genetic history—in which pre-natal chromosomal analysis of the embryo was made by tapping amniotic fluid from the mother's womb, and culturing the embryonic cells for microscopic examination.

"Only 11 of them needed to be interrupted (by therapeutic abortion)," he said. The other 36 were free of severe defects or only carriers, but would have been aborted if the decision had been left to the parents alone.

"Thus," he said, "we saved the lives, literally, of 36 children —and to me, that's great."

Proposes Bill To Clamp Down On Agitators

LANSING (AP) — The vice chairman of the special senate committee probing campus disorders says he will introduce a package of bills aimed at "clamping down on campus agitators."

Sen. James Fleming, R-Jackson, said the bills bear the names of 24 cosponsors, indicating "strong support. . . for a firmer handling of campus disruptions by college administrators."

"If those in authority on state college campuses will not exercise firm but fair authority in the face of anarchists out to destroy our great schools, then the Legislature must lay down the law to them," Fleming said.

The bills would ban bringing explosives and guns onto college campuses without the prior consent of the officials of the institutions; bar a student or faculty member from enrollment of employment if he were convicted of a crime involving a campus disorder; ban the use of bullhorns or portable loud speakers without prior approval of their use by administrators.

Fleming said penalties for violations of the provisions of these bills would range from misdemeanor to felony.

The committee, chaired by Sen. Robert Huber, R-Troy, still is working on its own report of campus activity.

Higher education assistance authority, an organization hired by the committee to do research work, indicated in its report earlier this year that no further legislation was needed to combat campus disorders.

The committee noted at that time, however, that the report was not that of the senators, and did not necessarily represent their own findings.

Russ Subs Close To U.S. Shores

WASHINGTON (AP) — Soviet Polaris-type missile-firing submarines are patrolling in the Atlantic within striking range of the United States, Pentagon sources say.

At least one such submarine, built to carry 16 nuclear tipped missiles with a range over 1,200 miles, has been detected in the mid-Atlantic.

Previously, Defense officials have said several Yankee-class Soviet nuclear submarines were operational, but indicated they hadn't ventured out for more than shakedown cruises.

Secretary of Defense Melvin R. Laird believes the Russians are on a crash program to bring their Polaris-type submarine force abreast or beyond the 41-boat U.S. missile launching fleet within four years.

About 12 Soviet Yankee-class subs, capable of shooting from the ocean depths, are reported operational—about twice as many as last fall. Another 12 or 14 of these vessels are said to be under construction.

It is not known how many Yankee-class subs have begun patrols. If they follow the U.S. method of operation, the Russians would send somewhat more than half of their force to sea at any one time.

There was some indication from Pentagon sources that at least one or more Yankee-class subs might be involved in the current worldwide Soviet naval maneuvers, which U.S. Navy spokesmen call the biggest ever in peace time.

Sources implied that Russian antisubmarine warfare units in the Atlantic may be exercising against missile-firing subs, perhaps in hopes of learning how to deal with the elusive U.S. undersea fleet.

Nearly 200 Soviet surface warships, submarines and auxiliary vessels are taking part in the maneuvers, centering chiefly in the Norwegian Sea and the North Atlantic.

Plaintiff Gets $3,000 In Auto Negligence Case

A Circuit Court jury of six men and six women today returned a verdict of no cause for action against William King of King's Bar, Escanaba, and awarded Ruth E. Helwig, 1019 Stephenson Ave., damages in the amount of $3,000 from Gordon M. Graham of St. Ignace.

The verdict came after trial of an auto negligence case which began in Circuit Court before Judge Bernard H. Davidson on Monday. The jury began deliberation at 2:25 Thursday afternoon and was sent home by the judge late in the afternoon. The jury returned at 9:30 a. m. today and returned the verdict shortly before noon.

A car which Mrs. Helwig was driving was struck in the rear by a car driven by Graham on May 5, 1969. Mrs. Helwig alleged that Graham was intoxicated at the time and that King's Bar served intoxicating beverages to Graham while he was already intoxicated. She asked damages for injuries she suffered in the accident.

Postal Reform Rift Foreseen

WASHINGTON (AP) — After a generally favorable reception before a House committee, President Nixon's postal reform legislation faced a hotter political climate during hearings before the Senate Post Office Committee.

Sen. Gale W. McGee, D-Wyo., committee chairman, lashed out Wednesday at Vice President Spiro T. Agnew for what McGee called "unfortunate, incorrect and divisively partisan" remarks in connection with the bill.

Agnew last week told a Republican audience congressional Democrats had stalled final action on the Nixon administration's plan for an independent U.S. postal service.

"The Vice President, in his partisan remarks, has introduced a divisive note into what has been a nonpartisan, pragmatic attempt to deal with the very real problems facing the Post Office Department," McGee said in a statement.

In testimony Wednesday before the House Post Office Committee, Postmaster General Winton M. Blount, when asked about Agnew's remarks, said the postal service plan is bipartisan. He said former President Lyndon B. Johnson also backed a postal corporation plan.

Rep. Thaddeus J. Dulski, D-N.Y., chairman of the House panel, said it will begin next week marking up the plan in hopes of putting it on the floor quickly.

The legislation is a result of an agreement between government and union negotiators reached after the nation's first postal strike spread to large sections of the country last month.

James Turner GOP Candidate For Governor

LANSING (AP) — James C. Turner, Howell magazine publisher, said today he is a Republican candidate for governor.

Turner, publisher of "Today" magazine, said he would make "shocking and awesome revelations" on May 7 about "the whole affair of Atty. Gen. Frank Kelley and the office of Governor Milliken."

Standing before a large floral display of chrysanthemums and lilies on the mahogany bar of the old supreme court chamber in the state capitol, Turner talked at length about his continuing probe of the Michigan legal establishment.

Information to back up charges against Kelley and Milliken, he said, was available in his office. He declined to elaborate today, saying" I might stumble over some of the names and places."

Space Program Gets Go-Ahead

WASHINGTON (AP) — The top man in the nation's space program said today the cause of the Apollo 13 failure appears relatively easy to correct, and if this proves true the nation's space program will stay on schedule.

Appearing before the Senate space committee, Dr. Thomas O. Paine, head of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, thus indicated that Apollo 14 will go as scheduled in October.

Astronauts James A. Lovell Jr. and John L. Swigert Jr. entered the packed hearing room with Paine to sustained applause from the audience and senators.

The third Apollo 13 astronaut, Fred W. Haise Jr., remained in Houston, Tex., on doctor's orders to help cure a minor infection from which he has been suffering since the flight.

Market Headed Downward Again

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market headed downard again early today in moderately active trading.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials at 10:30 a.m. had dropped 3.56 to 747.03.

Declines outran advances by about a 2 to 1 margin.

Price changes among key issues were mostly fractional with a few ranging between 1 and 2 points.

The market Thursday took its biggest loss in about nine months. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials sank 12.02 to 750.59. It had not dropped as much since July 10, 1969, when it fell 13.82. The average edged toward its lowest level of the year, which was 744.06 on Jan. 30.

Analysts attributed the severe drop to discouragement among investors. However, some analysts said the market was due for an upswing in response to recent heavy selling.

The Associated Press 60-stock average on Thursday was down 3.4 to 264.4.

Genetic Program May Be Answer To Retardation

women to abdominal X-rays can increase the risk of producing Mongoloid children—possibly by eight-fold compared with non-irradiated women—and the older the woman when irradiated, the greater the risk.

Most Common Form

Mongolism, which ordinarily occurs in one of every 600 to 1,000 children born, is the most common recognizable form of mental retardation.

3. Reported advances in detecting, in the general population, unknowing carriers of the most common form of muscular dystrophy; and some lesser progress toward detecting carriers of cystic fibrosis.

4. Growing evidence that the cause of many of mankind's most common cancers—such as malignancies of the breast, colon, stomach, and the lining of the womb—appear to be under genetic influence to a certain extent.

5. An implied challenge by Dr. John Money a psychologist of the Johns Hopkins University, to any view—scientific or popular—that a male child carrying the recently widely publicized aberrant chromosome combination, called "XYY," is inexorably headed for a criminal life.

Money said further studies need to be made before conclusions can be drawn.

Specialist Reports

On another subject, Dr. Carl M. Pearson of the University of California at Los Angeles Center for Health Sciences, and a specialist on muscular dystrophy, reported that:

Recent advances in the use of certain enzyme and other tests now make it possible to detect up to 90 per cent of those women who are unknowing carriers of the defective chromosome that can result in the "Duchene" type of muscular dystrophy, the commonest form, and the type that exclusively affects males. Females act as carriers.

Asserting that a woman who has had one son afflicted with the disease has a one-in-two chance of having another, Pearson said the new ability to detect most female carriers of the trait "provides a great opportunity for genetic counselling—and for encouraging such women not to have children because of the risk of passing on the disease (to a son)—and of passing on the carrier trait to at least one-half of their daughters."

Professor Disagrees

Dr. M. Neil Macintyre, an anatomy professor from Case University School of Medicine, Cleveeland, said he disagreed with Pearson—and with anyone else holding similar views about specifically recommending against having children because of possible genetic risks.

"Genetic counselling still is not an exact science," he said. "I'm definitely opposed to urging any couple not to have children—or to have them."

He said that, in general, the couple should be informed of the known facts about possible risks, but "you should try not to let your personal bias become evident . . . Leave it up to them."

Against Abortion

He also said he opposes "destroying a child"—through therapeutic abortion—"only on the basis of the child being a carrier" of some genetic disease, as determined by tests while the unborn child is still a developing embryo.

Parents whose first-born may have been deformed or defective should be given another chance to produce a normal child, Macintyre said.

Asked by a doctor, "isn't adoption a reasonable procedure in some cases?" Macintyre replied:

"We leave it up to them . . . it doesn't have to be no children at all—or adoption."

Reports On Results

In this connection, Macintyre reported on results of 47 cases of "very high risk" pregnancies —from the standpoint of adverse genetic history—in which pre-natal chromosomal analysis of the embryo was made by tapping amniotic fluid from the mother's womb, and culturing the embryonic cells for microscopic examination.

"Only 11 of them needed to be interrupted (by therapeutic abortion)," he said. The other 36 were free of severe defects or only carriers, but would have been aborted if the decision had been left to the parents alone.

"Thus," he said, "we saved the lives, literally, of 36 children —and to me, that's great."

Proposes Bill To Clamp Down On Agitators

LANSING (AP) — The vice chairman of the special senate committee probing campus disorders says he will introduce a package of bills aimed at "clamping down on campus agitators."

Sen. James Fleming, R-Jackson, said the bills bear the names of 24 cosponsors, indicating "strong support. . . for a firmer handling of campus disruptions by college administrators."

"If those in authority on state college campuses will not exercise firm but fair authority in the face of anarchists out to destroy our great schools, then the Legislature must lay down the law to them," Fleming said.

The bills would ban bringing explosives and guns onto college campuses without the prior consent of the officials of the institutions; bar a student or faculty member from enrollment of employment if he were convicted of a crime involving a campus disorder; ban the use of bullhorns or portable loud speakers without prior approval of their use by administrators.

Fleming said penalties for violations of the provisions of these bills would range from misdemeanor to felony.

The committee, chaired by Sen. Robert Huber, R-Troy, still is working on its own report of campus activity.

Higher education assistance authority, an organization hired by the committee to do research work, indicated in its report earlier this year that no further legislation was needed to combat campus disorders.

The committee noted at that time, however, that the report was not that of the senators, and did not necessarily represent their own findings.

Russ Subs Close To U.S. Shores

WASHINGTON (AP) — Soviet Polaris-type missile-firing submarines are patrolling in the Atlantic within striking range of the United States, Pentagon sources say.

At least one such submarine, built to carry 16 nuclear tipped missiles with a range over 1,200 miles, has been detected in the mid-Atlantic.

Previously, Defense officials have said several Yankee-class Soviet nuclear submarines were operational, but indicated they hadn't ventured out for more than shakedown cruises.

Secretary of Defense Melvin R. Laird believes the Russians are on a crash program to bring their Polaris-type submarine force abreast or beyond the 41-boat U.S. missile launching fleet within four years.

About 12 Soviet Yankee-class subs, capable of shooting from the ocean depths, are reported operational—about twice as many as last fall. Another 12 or 14 of these vessels are said to be under construction.

It is not known how many Yankee-class subs have begun patrols. If they follow the U.S. method of operation, the Russians would send somewhat more than half of their force to sea at any one time.

There was some indication from Pentagon sources that at least one or more Yankee-class subs might be involved in the current worldwide Soviet naval maneuvers, which U.S. Navy spokesmen call the biggest ever in peace time.

Sources implied that Russian antisubmarine warfare units in the Atlantic may be exercising against missile-firing subs, perhaps in hopes of learning how to deal with the elusive U.S. undersea fleet.

Nearly 200 Soviet surface warships, submarines and auxiliary vessels are taking part in the maneuvers, centering chiefly in the Norwegian Sea and the North Atlantic

A Circuit Court jury of six men and six women today returned a verdict of no cause for action against William King of King's Bar, Escanaba, and awarded Ruth E. Helwig, 1019 Stephenson Ave., damages in the amount of $3,000 from Gordon M. Graham of St. Ignace.

Postal Reform Rift Foreseen

WASHINGTON (AP) — After a generally favorable reception before a House committee, President Nixon's postal reform legislation faced a hotter political climate during hearings before the Senate Post Office Committee.

Sen. Gale W. McGee, D-Wyo., committee chairman, lashed out Wednesday at Vice President Spiro T. Agnew for what McGee called "unfortunate, incorrect and divisively partisan" remarks in connection with the bill.

Agnew last week told a Republican audience congressional Democrats had stalled final action on the Nixon administration's plan for an independent U.S. postal service.

"The Vice President, in his partisan remarks, has introduced a divisive note into what has been a nonpartisan, pragmatic attempt to deal with the very real problems facing the Post Office Department," McGee said in a statement.

In testimony Wednesday before the House Post Offfice Committee, Postmaster General Winton M. Blount, when asked about Agnew's remarks, said the postal service plan is bipartisan. He said former President Lyndon B. Johnson also backed a postal corporation plan.

Rep. Thaddeus J. Dulski, D-N.Y., chairman of the House panel, said it will begin next week marking up the plan in hopes of putting it on the floor quickly.

The legislation is a result of an agreement between government and union negotiators reached after the nation's first postal strike spread to large sections of the country last month.

Space Program Gets Go-Ahead

WASHINGTON (AP) — The top man in the nation's space program said today the cause of the Apollo 13 failure appears relatively easy to correct, and if this proves true the nation's space program will stay on schedule.

Appearing before the Senate space committee, Dr. Thomas O. Paine, head of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, thus indicated that Apollo 14 will go as scheduled in October.

Astronauts James A. Lovell Jr. and John L. Swigert Jr. entered the packed hearing room with Paine to sustained applause from the audience and senators.

The third Apollo 13 astronaut, Fred W. Haise Jr., remained in Houston, Tex., on doctor's orders to help cure a minor infection from which he has been suffering since the flight.

Market Headed Downward Again

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market headed downard again early today in moderately active trading.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials at 10:30 a.m. had dropped 3.56 to 747.03.

Declines outran advances by about a 2 to 1 margin.

Price changes among key issues were mostly fractional with a few ranging between 1 and 2 points.

The market Thursday took its biggest loss in about nine months. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials sank 12.02 to 750.59. It had not dropped as much since July 10, 1969, when it fell 13.82. The average edged toward its lowest level of the year, which was 744.06 on Jan. 30.

Analysts attributed the severe drop to discouragement among investors. However, some analysts said the market was due for an upswing in response to recent heavy selling.

The Associated Press 60-stock average on Thursday was down 3.4 to 264.4.

Camera Rated 'Star' On TV Whale Hunt

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP) — Real life adventure has been big with the television networks since the success of CBS's National Geographic and ABC's Cousteau series. And NBC, with a spectacular hour Thursday night, may have achieved the most dramatic and gory adventure tale of all when it took viewers on a whale hunt.

The program was filmed on the picturesque Azores island of Fayal. A photographer was with men of the island who harpooned a 40-ton sperm whale then found themselves in danger, surrounded by 30 or more of the huge creatures.

Much of the program leading up to the hunt centered around a 16-year-old island boy who dreamed of becoming a whale hunter. This section suffered from a certain element of amateur staginess and a language problem which even Jose Ferrer's sleek narration could not overcome.

The real star of the program was the camera. The color photography of the small, green island and the ocean was stunning.

The Azores whale hunters still use primitive equipment—lances, harpoons and small, frail boats. As in so many of ABC's "American Sportsman" programs, the climax was the kill. Inevitable as it was, the sight of the dying animal thrashing in a sea turned red by its blood must have been as distasteful to many.

The NBC hour was one of the freshest of actuality specials which have been turned up in recent days.

This viewer, sidelined with a fractured arm for the past month and largely dependent on television for entertainment, found time passed faster in the company of some of the syndicated programs seen on local stations than in that of network standbys.

"The Mike Douglas Show," for one, is easy-to-take variety done in pleasantly low-key. Betsy Palmer, who does her homework and actually listens to her guests, has given "Girl Talk" a new character and intelligent focus. Joe Garagiola and "He Said, She Said" may deliberately get a little blue but is the sprightliest new game show around.

And David Frost has fashioned the most engaging talk show of the lot—and there are a lot. It would be nice if Frost and his fellow interviewers could continue with an interesting guest when the talk flows well instead of quitting on the split second to bring on the girl singer or the stand up comic.

Herb Shriner, Wife Accident Victims

DELRAY BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Herb Shriner, the entertainer, and his wife, Eileen, were killed in a single-car traffic accident Thursday night. He was 51 and she was 43.

Shriner was returning from a performance in West Palm Beach. The couple's three children, a daughter Indy, 19, and twin sons, Kin and Wil, 16, were at home in Fort Lauderdale.

Shriner, who was raised in Indiana, was the star of television's "Two for the Money" in the early 1950s.

Authorities said the humorist's car ran off a road and hit a tree.

Reruns Only Part Of Summer Television

By JERRY BUCK

NEW YORK (AP) — The summertime is coming to be regarded as a television season in its own right.

There still will be plenty of reruns—economics dictates that—but the networks have lined up some relief for weary viewers.

For one thing, the Smothers Brothers are coming back. Pat Paulsen, whose own show is mercifully being dropped, will join them on ABC at 10 p.m. Wednesdays.

Tommy and Dick apparently are going to be closely watched, both as to ratings and behavior. ABC does not want to become embroiled in the kind of censorship battle that caused their firing by CBS last summer. Presumably, if they pass muster on both categories they will be offered an opening next January.

Summer also is the time for silly titles for shows. Try these: "Andy Williams Presents Everything Is Beautiful With Ray Stevens." "Dean Martin Presents the Golddiggers." "Johnny Cash Presents the Everly Brothers Show." doubt that anyone is going to forget who Andy Williams is over the summer.

Other original shows are on tap. "The Kraft Music Hall" will be hosted by British star Des O'Connor and taped in England. Glen Campbell will be replaced by a variety show to be called, tentatively, "Rap."

Half of "Hee Haw" on Wednesday will be replaced by cartoons called "Where's Huddles" and the other half by reruns of "Gomer Pyle." And Jim Nabors himself will be replaced by a music and comedy show known as "Happy Days." "Animal World," seen last summer on CBS, replaces Paulsen on ABC on Thursday.

CBS is bringing back three series from past seasons. Besides "Gomer," there's "Wild Wild West" for Carol Burnett on Monday nights and "He and She" for Tim Conway on Fridays. "He and She" was one of the most civilized comedies on the tube, but died of ratings anemia.

"The Virginian" is bringing back some of the best episodes from its eight years on the air. Among the stars to be seen are Lee Marvin, Lee J. Cobb, Bette Davis, Brian Keith and Geraldine Brooks. Next year "The Virginian" converts to a "Name of the Game" format with three alternating leads.

On Tuesday CBS is dropping "Lancer" and Red Skelton early to put in a third night of movies. The starting time is 7:30 p.m., the earliest for any network movie, so obviously many of them will be of broad family appeal.

In July and August, "Laugh-In" leaves the air to be replaced by longer Monday night movies and a half-hour series to be called "Monday Theatre." It's a potpourri of comedy and drama, which sounds like a mess of rejected pilots.

Five Manistique Students Earn Awards For Art

MARQUETTE — Five Manistique area students have been selected as award winners in an exhibit of Upper Peninsula Youth Art on display in Northern Michigan University's Olson Library.

The exhibit, sponsored by the U. P. Art Teachers Association and NMU, is open to the public through Saturday. It consists of works from students in elementary and secondary schools throughout the U. P.

Winners include:

Lower Elementary — James Marks, first grade, Hiawatha School, Manistique, fingerprint and cardboard strip painting on wet paper': Mike Knopp, second grade, Lincoln School, Manistique, newspaper, construction paper and paint; Boni MacGregor, third grade, Doyle School, Manistique, crayon drawing on construction paper.

Upper-Elementary — Kathy Ostlund, fifth grade, Lakeside School, Manistique, construction paper and colored tin foil.

Junior High — Russell Musselman, ninth grade, Manistique High School, three-color cardboard print.

A jury of five art instructors from the Upper Peninsula evaluated the exhibits.

At 1 p.m. Saturday, a reception will be given in the Olson Library for all exhibiting students, their parents, principals and superintendents. A formal presentation of awards will be made to the winning students during the reception, which is open to the public.

High school students will receive art books relating to their particular piece of work and the elementary and junior high students will each receive a large set of non-toxic felt tip pens. All winners will receive award ribbons.

Changing Time

DETROIT (AP) — Chrysler Corp. has announced that employes at many of its facilities in Michigan will start their days a half hour earlier during the period when the rest of the nation observes Daylight Savings Time.

The change, which will be in effect from April 26 to Oct. 25, will affect primarily salaried workers in general office, sales, engineering and associated operations, the company said.

Camera Rated 'Star' On TV Whale Hunt

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP) — Real life adventure has been big with the television networks since the success of CBS's National Geographic and ABC's Cousteau series. And NBC, with a spectacular hour Thursday night, may have achieved the most dramatic and gory adventure tale of all when it took viewers on a whale hunt.

The program was filmed on the picturesque Azores island of Fayal. A photographer was with men of the island who harpooned a 40-ton sperm whale then found themselves in danger, surrounded by 30 or more of the huge creatures.

Much of the program leading up to the hunt centered around a 16-year-old island boy who dreamed of becoming a whale hunter. This section suffered from a certain element of amateur staginess and a language problem which even Jose Ferrer's sleek narration could not overcome.

The real star of the program was the camera. The color photography of the small, green island and the ocean was stunning.

The Azores whale hunters still use primitive equipment—lances, harpoons and small, frail boats. As in so many of ABC's "American Sportsman" programs, the climax was the kill. Inevitable as it was, the sight of the dying animal thrashing in a sea turned red by its blood must have been as distasteful to many.

The NBC hour was one of the freshest of actuality specials which have been turned up in recent days.

This viewer, sidelined with a fractured arm for the past month and largely dependent on television for entertainment, found time passed faster in the company of some of the syndicated programs seen on local stations than in that of network standbys.

"The Mike Douglas Show," for one, is easy-to-take variety done in pleasantly low-key. Betsy Palmer, who does her homework and actually listens to her guests, has given "Girl Talk" a new character and intelligent focus. Joe Garagiola and "He Said, She Said" may deliberately get a little blue but is the sprightliest new game show around.

And David Frost has fashioned the most engaging talk show of the lot—and there are a lot. It would be nice if Frost and his fellow interviewers could continue with an interesting guest when the talk flows well instead of quitting on the split second to bring on the girl singer or the stand up comic.

Herb Shriner, Wife Accident Victims

DELRAY BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Herb Shriner, the entertainer, and his wife, Eileen, were killed in a single-car traffic accident Thursday night. He was 51 and she was 43.

Shriner was returning from a performance in West Palm Beach. The couple's three children, a daughter Indy, 19, and twin sons, Kin and Wil, 16, were at home in Fort Lauderdale.

Shriner, who was raised in Indiana, was the star of television's "Two for the Money" in the early 1950s.

Authorities said the humorist's car ran off a road and hit a tree.

Reruns Only Part Of Summer Television

By JERRY BUCK

NEW YORK (AP) — The summertime is coming to be regarded as a television season in its own right.

There still will be plenty of reruns—economics dictates that—but the networks have lined up some relief for weary viewers.

For one thing, the Smothers Brothers are coming back. Pat Paulsen, whose own show is mercifully being dropped, will join them on ABC at 10 p.m. Wednesdays.

Tommy and Dick apparently are going to be closely watched, both as to ratings and behavior. ABC does not want to become embroiled in the kind of censorship battle that caused their firing by CBS last summer. Presumably, if they pass muster on both categories they will be offered an opening next January.

Summer also is the time for silly titles for shows. Try these: "Andy Williams Presents Everything Is Beautiful With Ray Stevens." "Dean Martin Presents the Golddiggers." "Johnny Cash Presents the Everly Brothers Show." doubt that anyone is going to forget who Andy Williams is over the summer.

Other original shows are on tap. "The Kraft Music Hall" will be hosted by British star Des O'Connor and taped in England. Glen Campbell will be replaced by a variety show to be called, tentatively, "Rap."

Half of "Hee Haw" on Wednesday will be replaced by cartoons called "Where's Huddles" and the other half by reruns of "Gomer Pyle." And Jim Nabors himself will be replaced by a music and comedy show known as "Happy Days." "Animal World," seen last summer on CBS, replaces Paulsen on ABC on Thursday.

CBS is bringing back three series from past seasons. Besides "Gomer," there's "Wild Wild West" for Carol Burnett on Monday nights and "He and She" for Tim Conway on Fridays. "He and She" was one of the most civilized comedies on the tube, but died of ratings anemia.

"The Virginian" is bringing back some of the best episodes from its eight years on the air. Among the stars to be seen are Lee Marvin, Lee J. Cobb, Bette Davis, Brian Keith and Geraldine Brooks. Next year "The Virginian" converts to a "Name of the Game" format with three alternating leads.

On Tuesday CBS is dropping "Lancer" and Red Skelton early to put in a third night of movies. The starting time is 7:30 p.m., the earliest for any network movie, so obviously many of them will be of broad family appeal.

In July and August, "Laugh-In" leaves the air to be replaced by longer Monday night movies and a half-hour series to be called "Monday Theatre." It's a potpourri of comedy and drama, which sounds like a mess of rejected pilots.

House Appeal Could Help Bring About Right Price

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

If you want to sell your house this spring, you should take an inventory of its good and bad points, and try to give it house appeal.

When you are aware of its assets and liabilities, you'll know where you stand as a house seller.

That old castle may not be what it used to be, much as you love it. A prospective owner's eyes may be riveted to the flaw you haven't noticed in years.

For example, a woman may notice fire hazards—that you have lamp cords plugged into double or triple sockets and that there aren't enough outlets for kitchen appliances. The sharp-eyed husband will question whether the house is adequately wired. (A few more outlets will be worth the expense, and you may even need to install that higher voltage.)

If your house is a hot box, consider an inexpensive air conditioning machine in one or more rooms. A small unit may provide you with your biggest selling point—"this house is worth its weight in ice cubes . . . we hate to leave it in summer, it is so cool . . . we are going to miss it, it is so cool," etc.)

Women like pretty bathrooms. If wall tiles need caulking and the shower arrangement is tacky, you should attend to replacements. A new shower sheet, wastebasket and rug can improve tremendously the look of a bathroom. Pink is a color that appeals to most women, if you are stuck for ideas.

While the woman house buyer is inspecting the kitchen, bathroom and living room—her main points of interest, her husband no doubt will give his attention to the basement and utility area.

If you have a wet cellar, don't open your house for inspection until you find a solution to the problem. It is frustrating to try to sell a house that has a water seepage problem. If you have your cellar waterproofed, you can honestly say it is dry and show it without fear. Many people can detect the high humidity and mildew scent of a recently flooded basement, so you really can't bluff it.

There are good waterproofing products available for such jobs. One is applied in a shallow trench on the ground outside the basement wall. Another method is done inside by professional people. An awful lot of money can be wasted, trying to get a permanent solution. The best recommendations for such products may be obtained by querying neighbors who have had the water seepage problem.

Another thing about the basement area is that it should be neat and clean. Try putting things in one area so that it looks as if it has a good deal of space. You'll be surprised at the spatial effects you can achieve with a little effort.

If it is an old cellar, make sure that cables and wires aren't hanging from the ceiling beams. Cobwebs and dust should be vacuumed. If insulation is hanging from ducts in a sloppy fashion, you should renew it. There are plastic tapes especially for duct-work seams and these make a nice neat job of it.

Are there cracks in ceilings of living room, dining room or kitchen. Somehow, these are more annoying to people than the bad condition of bedroom ceilings. They are worth the effort of repair.

Wash walls if they are finger-marked or greasy.

It is little things that make a cheery impression with house shoppers. How about papering closets? It costs little in self-labor and self-stick papers. Use bright colors. Even timid decorators appreciate color in a closet.

How about those litle extras you are "going to leave in the house" . . . an inexpensive planter with a few plants . . . the curtains (which don't fit in your new house anyway), the dimmer light control . . . Play it up to the lady house shopper.

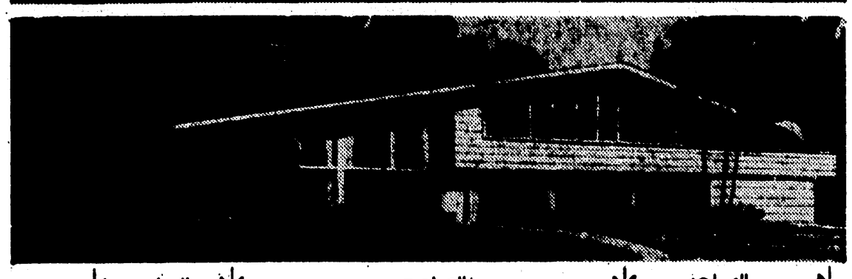

You should provide an air of tranquillity on the day your house is being shown. Farm out the children and Fido, if you can. A lot of house sales are lost because crying children and barking dogs left the house shoppers with an unpleasant feeling of noisiness. A noisy hot water system is another detriment when you are showing the house. Turn the heating system down for the occasion. Everybody gets used to such things, but if they hear it beforehand, they may decide it "will get on our nerves."

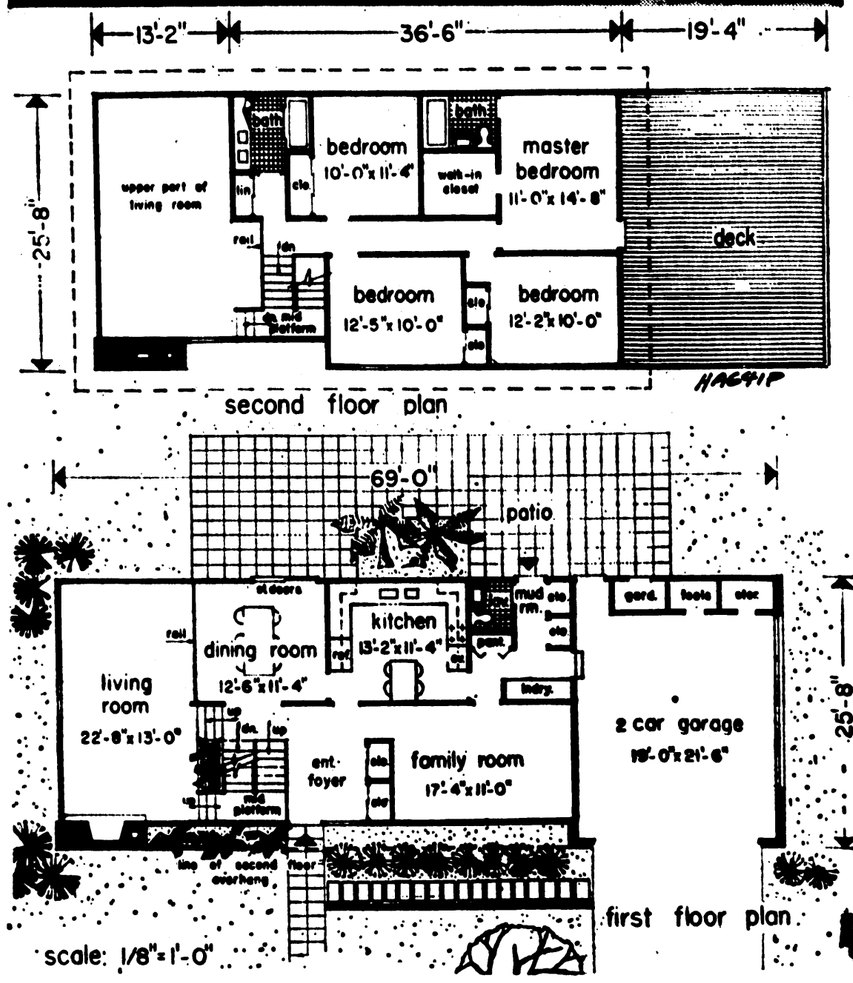

The most important house pickup begins outdoors. If paint is peling on the house, scrape the little peels. It is easier to sell a freshly painted house, but it is a bit much to worry about when you are moving in a rush—and the lookers will understand.

A house entrance makes the first impression. Does the driveway look sloshy and unfinished? What can you do to improve it. If there is a terrace at the rear of the house, put the outdoor furniture in place. You can also make a house look more attractive by shining the windows, putting flowers in rooms and having clean rugs on the floor.

The overall impression should be a clean, pleasant, tranquil one, and your house will sell itself, if the price is right.

HOMES FOR AMERICANS

A LIVING ROOM, raised four steps above the ground floor is a novel feature of this two-story home. Also on the first floor are a spacious entrance foyer which enables circulation to all rooms, a large eat-in kitchen and an efficient rear entry. On the second floor are four bedrooms, two full baths and ample closet space. For private outdoor relaxation there is an upstairs deck, over the garage. The plan requires a minimum lot of 85 by 75 square feet. Plan HA641P, with 1,998 square feet of indoor space, was designed by architect Samuel Paul, 8930 161st Street, Jamaica, New York, 11432.

ON THE HOUSE

Versatile and easy to handle, the portable electric drill was the first of the power tools to attain widespread popularity with the do-it-yourselfer. It has never lost its important position in the home as a useful machine, getting particular attention in recent years from women.

While the primary function of a drill is to make holes in wood, metal and other materials, it can perform a large variety of other tasks, all made possible with dozens of accessories and attachments. Within the past three or four years, most manufacturers have come out with deluxe models that have special features, not the least of which are shockproof housings.

Someone purchasing a portable electric drill for the first time would do well to select one of the kits which contains, in addition to the drill, several bits, a wire wheel, a grinding wheel, sanding and polishing equipment and, in some cases, a horizontal drill stand. The stand enables the drill to be used in a set position, making it a kind of miniature drill press.

When not abused, a portable electric drill is one of the most durable tools on the market. The difference between proper use and abuse is often very little and entails no more than a bit of thought now and then. Once the fundamentals are followed a few times, the correct handling becomes a matter of habit.

To prevent the bit from wandering and marring the work done when drilling into wood, always use a brad awl or nail to mark a point which is to be the center of the hole. The bit should be placed in this mark before starting the motor. Pressure should be moderately firm, never heavy, since too much pressure might stall the drill. This is especially important when drilling into hardwood since the resistance of the material encourages a tendency to make the drill work faster than it should.

When drilling into metal, be sure the work is firmly anchored. Bending or distortion of thin metal can be prevented by backing it with a wooden block. The starting hole is made with a center punch. Apply only enough pressure to the drill to keep the bit cutting smoothly. When using a heavy metal turpentine and kerosene are among the lubricants that should be used on the bit.

Masonry drilling must be done with a carbide-tipped bit. In this case, heavy pressure on the drill is necessary. Since this can be tiring, you will want to stop now and then. To prevent damage to the bit, the trick is to remove the bit from the hole while the motor is still on, then release the trigger.

The quarter-inch drill is the most popular, but there are many other larger sizes for heavy duty work. The size refers to the maximum diameter of the bit shank that can be held in the drill chuck, not to the size of the hole that can be drilled. But if most of your work involves the drilling of holes larger than one-quarter of an inch, you would be wiser to use a larger-sized drill.

HERE'S THE ANSWER

Q.—My husband won's listen to me. He reads your questions and answers all the time, so maybe he will listen to you. We have a ranch house with wood siding painted white. There is an attached garage with an overhead entrance door at the front of the house. The door is in need of painting. My husband is an amateur artist and has done a good job of painting a landscape scene on one wall of a room in the house. Now he wants to paint some kind of a design on the garage door. I don't want him to do it, as I think it will cheapen the looks of the house. Can you convince him that I'm right?

A.—We're not sure we can convince him of anything—but we'll try. It has always been our opinion that a garage door at the front of a house should blend in with the rest of the house and not be a focal point. It is the house itself that should catch the eye. When a garage door is painted a bright color, as is sometimes done with a house of good design, people notice the door first instead of the over-all structure. This would be oven more likely to occur if there were a painting on the door. Sorry, sir, but we have to agree with your wife.

Q. — Over the years I have read of many different ways to keep skin from forming on leftover paint after it has been on the shelf a few weeks or months. Nothing seems to work for me. I understand the skin forms because of the paint's contact with the air. No matter how tightly I seal the can, the paint winds up with a skin covering. Why is this?

A. — Keeping the can airtight helps, but remember that there is plenty of air in the partly filled can before you close it. Do the best you can and don't worry about it Why not simply remove the skin before you remix the paint? If you can't get all of it out, cover another container with a piece of cheesecloth and pour the paint into it. The cloth will trap any pieces of paint skin you failed to remove.

Q.—I am thinking about having our roof reshingled. It now has wood shingles, but I want to get asphalt shingles. Can they be put on right over the wood or will the old roof have to be removed?

A.—Unless there is something structurally defective—such as rotted supports—the asphalt shingles can be installed over the wood. But the job must be done properly. This involves removing loose or protruding nails and replacing them; renailing loose shingles; and splitting badly warped shingles and nailing down the segments. Where old shingles are badly curled or turned at the butts, a feathering strip nailed along the butt edges will provide a smooth surface for new shingles and a solid nailing base. The installation of 1" by 4" or 1" by 6" wood strips at the eaves and rakes, after removal of sufficient old wood shingles to make room for the strips, will result in better alignment of the new shingles, better nailing and added wind resistance. Use of suitable drip edges and eave flashing strips are other important steps in proper re-roofing.

Are You Paying More Dough For Same Bread?

WASHINGTON (AP) — The house wife who pays the few cents extra for certain specialty breads may be getting nothing substantially different from plain bread.

A survey by the Food and Drug Administration, guardian of the nation's staff of life, concludes that in some butter, egg, potato and buttermilk breads the amounts of special ingredients are unreasonably low.

In one instance, a butter bread was found to contain no butter at all. Other butter breads were found to contain as much as 2½ pats.

The average number of pats found to be present was 1½, or three-eights of an ounce. The FDA survey showed 80 per cent of the consumers expected to get 2 pats or more in their butter bread.

The survey found as little as one-fifth of an egg or as much as one and one-third eggs in egg bread. The average of half an egg compared to the one egg or more expected by 75 per cent of the consumers.

The survey found similar wide variations in the other specialties: From one-third of an ounce toujus5 shy of a full ounce of potato flour, from one-half ounce to nine ounces of buttermilk.

Bakers say the special ingredients are added to give the breads a distinctive flavor. How much is needed, they say, is largely a matter of taste.

"A comparison of the surveys of consumers and manufacturers reveals that some bakers' formulas are lower than may be considered reasonable as to the quantity actually present of the ingredient that is named on the label," said the FDA in its report.

The report has revived action on possible requirements for how much or how little of the ingredients covered in the survey should be included in bread.

The government proposed standards for all specialty breads in 1941, but when the standards were finally set in 1952 they covered only white bread, whole wheat bread, enriched bread, milk bread and raisin bread.

The industry and FDA have been conferring in the past year on possible additional standards. "It looks like we'll have little trouble getting a meeting of the minds," said an industry spokesman.

Proposed standards for butter, egg, potato and buttermilk bread will be presented to the annual convention of the Association of the Retail Bakers of America on May 15.

I don't want him to do it, as I think it will cheapen the looks of the house. Can you convince him that I'm right?

A.—We're not sure we can convince him of anything—but we'll try. It has always been our opinion that a garage door at the front of a house should blend in with the rest of the house and not be a focal point. It is the house itself that should catch the eye. When a garage door is painted a bright color, as is sometimes done with a house of good design, people notice the door first instead of the over-all structure. This would be oven more likely to occur if there were a painting on the door. Sorry, sir, but we have to agree with your wife.

Q. — Over the years I have read of many different ways to keep skin from forming on leftover paint after it has been on the shelf a few weeks or months. Nothing seems to work for me. I understand the skin forms because of the paint's contact with the air. No matter how tightly I seal the can, the paint winds up with a skin covering. Why is this?

A. — Keeping the can airtight helps, but remember that there is plenty of air in the partly filled can before you close it. Do the best you can and don't worry about it. Why not simply remove the skin before you remix the paint? If you can't get all of it out, cover another container with a piece of cheesecloth and pour the paint into it. The cloth will trap any pieces of paint skin you failed to remove.

Q.—I am thinking about having our roof reshingled. It now has wood shingles, but I want to get asphalt shingles. Can they be put on right over the wood or will the old roof have to be removed?

A.—Unless there is something structurally defective—such as rotted supports—the asphalt shingles can be installed over the wood. But the job must be done properly. This involves removing loose or protruding nails and replacing them; renailing loose shingles; and splitting badly warped shingles and nailing down the segments. Where old shingles are badly curled or turned at the butts, a feathering strip nailed along the butt edges will provide a smooth surface for new shingles and a solid nailing base. The installation of 1" by 4" or 1" by 6" wood strips at the eaves and rakes, after removal of sufficient old wood shingles to make room for the strips, will result in better alignment of the new shingles, better nailing and added wind resistance. Use of suitable drip edges and eave flashing strips are other important steps in proper reroofing.

Are You Paying More Dough For Same Bread?

WASHINGTON (AP) — The house wife who pays the few cents extra for certain specialty breads may be getting nothing substantially different from plain bread.

A survey by the Food and Drug Administration, guardian of the nation's staff of life, concludes that in some butter, egg, potato and buttermilk breads the amounts of special ingredients are unreasonably low.

In one instance, a butter bread was found to contain no butter at all. Other butter breads were found to contain as much as 2½ pats.

The average number of pats found to be present was 1½, or three-eights of an ounce. The FDA survey showed 80 per cent of the consumers expected to get 2 pats or more in their butter bread.

The survey found as little as one-fifth of an egg or as much as one and one-third eggs in egg bread. The average of half an egg compared to the one egg or more expected by 75 per cent of the consumers.

The survey found similar wide variations in the other specialties: From one-third of an ounce toujus5 shy of a full ounce of potato flour, from one-half ounce to nine ounces of buttermilk.

Bakers say the special ingredients are added to give the breads a distinctive flavor. How much is needed, they say, is largely a matter of taste.

"A comparison of the surveys of consumers and manufacturers reveals that some bakers' formulas are lower than may be considered reasonable as to the quantity actually present of the ingredient that is named on the label," said the FDA in its report.

The report has revived action on possible requirements for how much or how little of the ingredients covered in the survey should be included in bread.

The government proposed standards for all specialty breads in 1941, but when the standards were finally set in 1952 they covered only white bread, whole wheat bread, enriched bread, milk bread and raisin bread.

The industry and FDA have been conferring in the past year on possible additional standards. "It looks like we'll have little trouble getting a meeting of the minds," said an industry spokesman.

Proposed standards for butter, egg, potato and buttermilk bread will be presented to the annual convention of the Association of the Retail Bakers of America on May 15.

Versatile and easy to handle, the portable electric drill was the first of the power tools to attain widespread popularity with the do-it-yourselfer. It has never lost its important position in the home as a useful machine, getting particular attention in recent years from women.

While the primary function of a drill is to make holes in wood, metal and other materials, it can perform a large variety of other tasks, all made possible with dozens of accessories and attachments. Within the past three or four years, most manufacturers have come out with deluxe models that have special features, not the least of which are shockproof housings.

Someone purchasing a portable electric drill for the first time would do well to select one of the kits which contains, in addition to the drill, several bits, a wire wheel, a grinding wheel, sanding and polishing equipment and, in some cases, a horizontal drill stand. The stand enables the drill to be used in a set position, making it a kind of miniature drill press.

When not abused, a portable electric drill is one of the most durable tools on the market. The difference between proper use and abuse is often very little and entails no more than a bit of thought now and then. Once the fundamentals are followed a few times, the correct handling becomes a matter of habit.

To prevent the bit from wandering and marring the work done when drilling into wood, always use a brad awl or nail to mark a point which is to be the center of the hole. The bit should be placed in this mark before starting the motor. Pressure should be moderately firm, never heavy, since too much pressure might stall the drill. This is especially important when drilling into hardwood since the resistance of the material encourages a tendency to make the drill work faster than it should.

When drilling into metal, be sure the work is firmly anchored. Bending or, distortion of thin metal can be prevented by backing it with a wooden block. The starting hole is made with a center punch. Apply only enough pressure to the drill to keep the bit cutting smoothly. When using a heavy metal turpentne and kerosene are among the lubricants that should be used on the bit.

Masonry drilling must be done with a carbide-tipped bit. In this case, heavy pressure on the drill is necessary. Since this can be tiring, you will want to stop now and then. To prevent damage to the bit, the trick is to remove the bit from the hole while the motor is still on, then release the trigger.

The quarter-inch drill is the most popular, but there are many other larger sizes for heavy duty work. The size refers to the maximum diameter of the bit shank that can be held in the drill chuck, not to the size of the hole that can be drilled. But if most of your work involves the drilling of holes larger than one-quarter of an inch, you would be wiser to use a larger-sized drill.

Lucy M. Berglund, 716 3rd Ave. S., has been awarded the designation of "Realtor," by the National Association of Real Estate Boards through the Michigan Real Estate Association.

Mrs. Berglund was presented with the designation by Howard H. Billings, realtor, president of the Upper Peninsula Board of Realtors at a meeting in Crystal Falls recently.

The term Realtor, coined in 1915, is considered synonymous with high integrity and excellence in the real estate industry, and is now a registered trademark with the U. S. Patent Office. Since its registration, under the Lanhorn Act in 1949, the courts have constantly upheld its exclusive use by those who hold membership in their local real estate boards, State Association and the National Association of Real Estate Boards.

Mrs. Berglund has been active in the real estate business in Escanaba for over four years. She is associated with William DeHaan, realtor, owner of Art Goulais Real Estate agency; is the only woman in the Upper Peninsula presently active in the real estate business, to have the realtor designation, and is the second woman in the U. Q.—Our doorbell stopped ringing recently. I am fairly handy around the house, but I never fool around with the electricity. However, I remember reading that there is an easy way to tell if the pushbutton is out of order and requires a replacement. Can you tell me how?

A.—The voltage necessary to operate a doorbell is so little as to be virtually harmless. Even under the worst conditions, the most you would get would be a tiny, almost imperceptable vibration. Under normal conditions, you will feel nothing.

To test whether a pushbutton is at fault, disconnect it from the outside wall by taking out the two screws. Two wires will be attached to two screws inside the button mechanism. If one of them is loose, there's your trouble Reconnect it and the bell will work. But if both wires are securely attached, place the metal part of a screwdriver across the two screw terminals. If the bell rings, then the pushbutton is the culprit. Clean the contact points with emery cloth or sandpaper. If the bell doesn't ring when the wires are attached and you push the button, buy a new pushbutton, attach it and the trouble will be over.

When, during your original inspection, the bell fails to ring when you make the screwdriver test, the problem is with the bell itself, the dry-cell batteries (some doorbells still use them), the wiring or, very infrequently, the transformer. When a bell rings constantly and doesn't stop, two uninsulated wires are touching, causing a short circuit, in which case you have to trace the wires and find the break.

Q.—I will be 65 years old in a couple of months. When I retire at that time, I expect to sell my house and move to another city, where my wife and I will pay rent to my son, who owns a two-family house. I have been told that I can get about $18,000 for my present house. I paid only $12,000 for it. Is it true, as I have been told, that I won't have to pay any income taxes on the profit because I will be over 65 years old at the time of the sale?

A.—Your information is correct. The tax law says that if you are more than 65 years old at the time you sell your house, you do not have to pay a tax on the profit—provided that you have lived in the house for five of the past eight years and that the sale price is not over $20,000. If it should be over $20,000, then only part of the profit is taxed.

Four Bedroom Small House

By ANDY LANG

A house with two and one-half bathrooms is usually not considered "small." This one is, since architect Herman H. York has managed to keep the habitable area to 1406 square feet by holding the rooms to economical sizes.

Included are many features normally found in larger houses, such as a covered front entrance, separate dining room, family room, private bath for the owner, dinette space in the kitchen, pantry and a lavatory between the kitchen and the garage.

S-41 STATISTICS

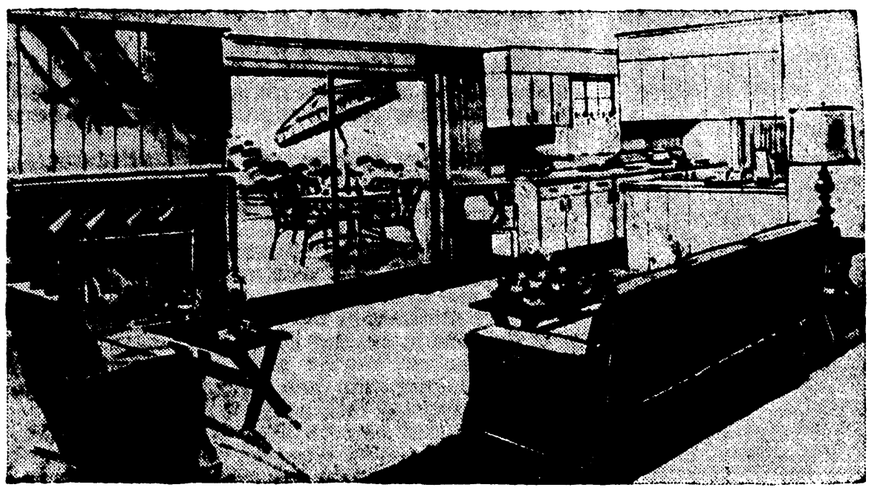

Design S-41 has a living room, dining room, family room, kitchen, three bedrooms and two baths, totaling 1406 square feet. The laundry area to the right of the kitchen includes a pantry and a lavatory. In front of that is a one-car garage with a storage area along one wall. The over-all dimensions of the house, including the garage, are 62' by 33'. If a two-car garage were needed, 10' 4" would be added to the frontage. There is an expansion area over the bedrooms which could be used as a studio or hobby center. If the room were to be utilized as a fourth bedroom, an upstairs bathroom could be included. A cellar, extending below the entire house, is accessible from the main hall on the first floor.

In addition, there is the expansion possibility of the area above the bedrooms, where 300 square feet of extra space can be arranged as a family studio, hobby center or fourth bedroom.

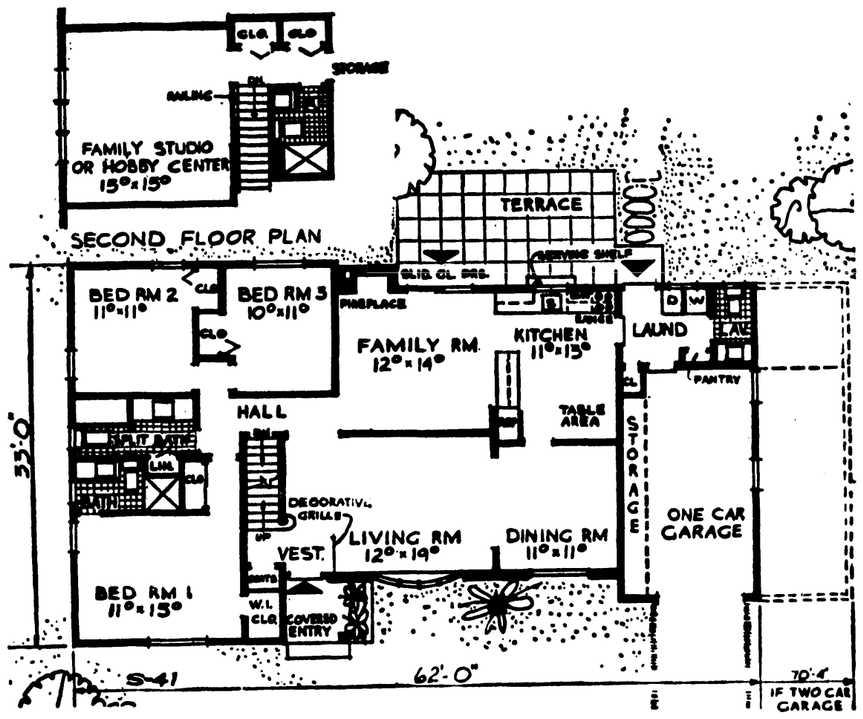

Taking a closer look at the plan layout, we find, upon entering the house, a sweep of 30' across the length of the living and dining rooms. From the entrance, one can go directly into either the living room or to the less formal family room. The family room leads to the rear terrace through sliding glass doors. As soon as one enters the family room, there is a view of a masonry fireplace, located conveniently to the rear yard and its supply of firewood.

To extend the length of the family room, a counter and wall cabinet are used in lieu of a solid wall between that room and the kitchen. Since there usually is an informal decor in the family room, an open plan arrangement involving it and the kitchen makes for ease of movement and an atmosphere of spaciousness.

The kitchen is at the hub of circulation, making for convenient service to all adjacent spaces, including the family room, laundry and rear terrace outdoor dining. The kitchen window has a pass-through and exterior shelf making serving to the outside an easier task.

FAMILY ROOM, adjacent to kitchen, has brick fireplace and sliding glass doors leading to rear terrace. Room is reached directly from the entrance hall.

FLOOR PLANS: Utilization of all available space (no large foyer, for instance) has enabled architect to place seven rooms, two baths and a lavatory on the first floor in an area of less than 1500 square feet. Upstairs room is optional.

In the bedroom area at the left side of the house are three rooms and two baths. The hall bath, arranged in a split layout, has its own linen closet. The bathroom in the master bedroom has a stall shower.

Outside Design S-41 is clothed in wood shingled walls and asphalt roofing. However, the main front wall, with two interior corners, utilizes fieldstone veneer. Since large portions of the wall are eliminated by the windows and a door, the area of the wall is minimal. The use of stone at the entrance is a device popular with architects, as it tends to create a first impression of luxury. In this case, in order to keep the house somewhat informal, a cross buck door is used, complimenting the arched covered entry.

False Statments Causing Trouble

MIAMI (AP) — A Miami doctor was indicted by a federal grand jury Thursday for allegedly making false statements to get overpayments for treating medicare patients.

The grand jury filed 11 charges against Dr. Apostoles G. Chakmakis, stemming from his reports to Blue Shield of Florida Inc., about the number of house calls and office visits he made in 1967 and 1968.

Blue Shield of Florida Inc., is the medicare paying agent in the state for the Social Security Administration.

ON THE HOUSE

By ANDY LANG

AP Newsfeatures Writer

If you own a house, the chances are you own an outside ladder. It's a simple piece of equipment, made of wood or metal and without any menacing appearance. But it is a potential source of danger, as the safety statistics make clear year after year.

Careless handling is the most frequent cause of ladder accidents, but a structural breakdown sometimes is the offender. The second reason for trouble can be dispensed with very quickly. You need not worry about your ladder failing to hold you if you purchase one that is in good condition (not as silly as it sounds) and if you keep it that way.

When buying a ladder, check all parts carefully to be sure that it hasn't been damaged in some way during transportation or because it has been banged around a bit by store employes. Especially note whether the rungs and side rails are solidly connected and that all hardware connections are secure. After you own the ladder, treat it well. Don't leave it outside in all kinds of weather. And don't paint it, since the paint may hide defects that might occur at a later time.

In setting up a ladder against the house, its feet should not be too far from the foundation and not too close. An easy way to get the proper distance is to divide the length of the ladder by four. That's how far the bottom of the ladder should be from the house. It would be 4 feet, for instance, for a 16-foot ladder.

A safe ladder should be equipped with safety treads or some device to prevent it from sliding. After the ladder is set in place, stand on the bottom rung and jump up and down a few times to be sure it is firmly placed. Since a ladder slips sideways when its user foolishly leans over too far to reach a certain spot on the house, it's a good idea to buy one of the extension safety devices that are attached to the upper part of the ladder so that slippage is not too likely. But don't allow the device to make you so confident that you take silly chances while high in the air.

Never go higher than the third rung from the top of the ladder. If there are children playing in the vicinity, get them out of there or postpone your project until they are gone. Unless you are experienced in handling the movement of large, heavy ladders, get someone to give you a hand when performing that chore. When you are working in front of a door, it isn't enough to tell the other members of the family not to open the door; either keep the door open all the way or lock it.

And if it's a windy day, forget about the whole thing.

ATTRACTIVE BOW WINDOW of living room adds to comfortable appearance of modest traditional home. Although wood shingles comprise most of exterior wall surface, a small amount of fieldstone veneer is used in the area of the covered entranceway.

Four Bedroom Small House

By ANDY LANG

A house with two and one-half bathrooms is usually not considered "small." This one is, since architect Herman H. York has managed to keep the habitable area to 1406 square feet by holding the rooms to economical sizes.

Included are many features normally found in larger houses, such as a covered front entrance, separate dining room, family room, private bath for the owner, dinette space in the kitchen, pantry and a lavatory between the kitchen and the garage.

In addition, there is the expansion possibility of the area above the bedrooms, where 300 square feet of extra space can be arranged as a family studio, hobby center or fourth bedroom.

Taking a closer look at the plan layout, we find, upon entering the house, a sweep of 30' across the length of the living and dining rooms. From the entrance, one can go directly into either the living room or to the less formal family room. The family room leads to the rear terrace through sliding glass doors. As soon as one enters the family room, there is a view of a masonry fireplace, located conveniently to the rear yard and its supply of firewood.

To extend the length of the family room, a counter and wall cabinet are used in lieu of a solid wall between that room and the kitchen. Since there usually is an informal decor in the family room, an open plan arrangement involving it and the kitchen makes for ease of movement and an atmosphere of spaciousness.

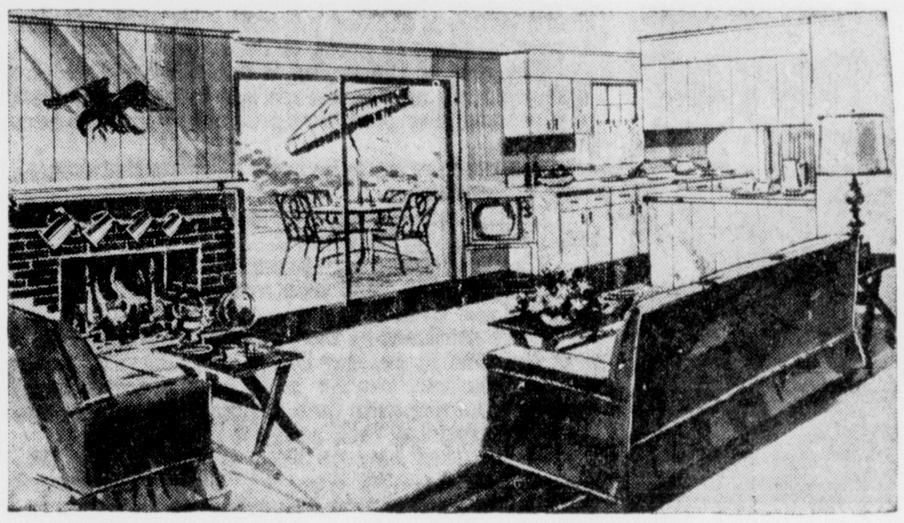

The kitchen is at the hub of circulation, making for convenient service to all adjacent spaces, including the family room, laundry and rear terrace outdoor dining. The kitchen window has a pass-through and exterior shelf making serving to the outside an easier task.

In the bedroom area at the left side of the house are three rooms and two baths. The hall bath, arranged in a split layout, has its own linen closet. The bathroom in the master bedroom has a stall shower.

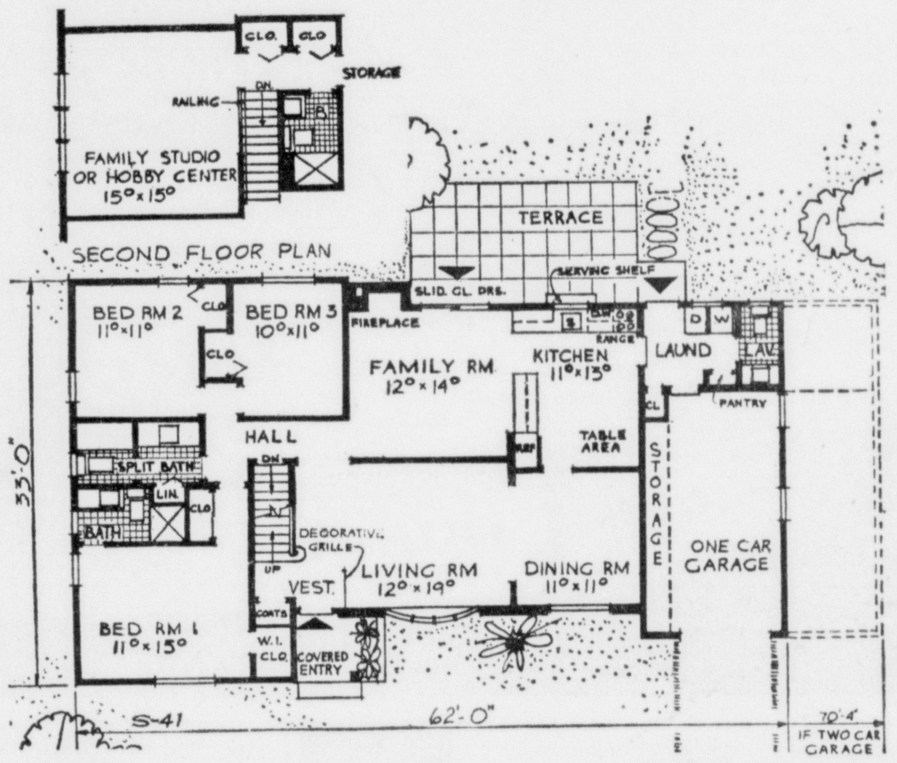

Outside Design S-41 is clothed in wood shingled walls and asphalt roofing. However, the main front wall, with two interior corners, utilizes fieldstone veneer. Since large portions of the wall are eliminated by the windows and a door, the area of the wall is minimal. The use of stone at the entrance is a device popular with architects, as it tends to create a first impression of luxury. In this case, in order to keep the house somewhat informal, a cross buck door is used, complimenting the arched covered entry.

S-41 STATISTICS

Design S-41 has a living room, dining room, family room, kitchen, three bedrooms and two baths, totaling 1406 square feet. The laundry area to the right of the kitchen includes a pantry and a lavatory. In front of that is a one-car garage with a storage area along one wall. The over-all dimensions of the house, including the garage, are 62' by 33'. If a two-car garage were needed, 10' 4" would be added to the frontage. There is an expansion area over the bedrooms which could be used as a studio or hobby center. If the room were to be utilized as a fourth bedroom, an upstairs bathroom could be included. A cellar, extending below the entire house, is accessible from the main hall on the first floor.

FAMILY ROOM, adjacent to kitchen, has brick fireplace and sliding glass doors leading to rear terrace. Room is reached directly from the entrance hall.

FLOOR PLANS: Utilization of all available space (no large foyer, for instance) has enabled architect to place seven rooms, two baths and a lavatory on the first floor in an area of less than 1500 square feet. Upstairs room is optional.

False Statments Causing Trouble

MIAMI (AP) — A Miami doctor was indicted by a federal grand jury Thursday for allegedly making false statements to get overpayments for treating medicare patients.

The grand jury filed 11 charges against Dr. Apostoles G. Chakmakis, stemming from his reports to Blue Shield of Florida Inc., about the number of house calls and office visits he made in 1967 and 1968.

Blue Shield of Florida Inc., is the medicare paying agent in the state for the Social Security Administration.

By ANDY LANG

AP Newsfeatures Writer

If you own a house, the chances are you own an outside ladder. It's a simple piece of equipment, made of wood or metal and without any menacing appearance. But it is a potential source of danger, as the safety statistics make clear year after year.

Careless handling is the most frequent cause of ladder accidents, but a structural breakdown sometimes is the offender. The second reason for trouble can be dispensed with very quickly. You need not worry about your ladder failing to hold you if you purchase one that is in good condition (not as silly as it sounds) and if you keep it that way.

When buying a ladder, check all parts carefully to be sure that it hasn't been damaged in some way during transportation or because it has been banged around a bit by store employes. Especially note whether the rungs and side rails are solidly connected and that all hardware connections are secure. After you own the ladder, treat it well. Don't leave it outside in all kinds of weather. And don't paint it, since the paint may hide defects that might occur at a later time.

In setting up a ladder against the house, its feet should not be too far from the foundation and not too close. An easy way to get the proper distance is to divide the length of the ladder by four. That's how far the bottom of the ladder should be from the house. It would be 4 feet, for instance, for a 16-foot ladder.

A safe ladder should be equipped with safety treads or some device to prevent it from sliding. After the ladder is set in place, stand on the bottom rung and jump up and down a few times to be sure it is firmly placed. Since a ladder slips sideways when its user foolishly leans over too far to reach a certain spot on the house, it's a good idea to buy one of the extension safety devices that are attached to the upper part of the ladder so that slippage is not too likely. But don't allow the device to make you so confident that you take silly chances while high in the air.

Never go higher than the third rung from the top of the ladder. If there are children playing in the vicinity, get them out of there or postpone your project until they are gone. Unless you are experienced in handling the movement of large, heavy ladders, get someone to give you a hand when performing that chore. When you are working in front of a door, it isn't enough to tell the other members of the family not to open the door; either keep the door open all the way or lock it.

And if it's a windy day, forget about the whole thing.

A Birds-Eye View Of Minneapolis Shoal

The Coast Guard members of the Escanaba station launched their 30-foot utility boat and made their first trip of the season in it, to the Minneapolis Shoal lighthouse, this week.

The lighthouse officially opened for the season on March 27, and until this week crews were transported to and from the lighthouse by the Coast Guard Cutter Mesquite.

The Minneapolis Shoal lighthouse was built in 1938 and stands 82 feet high on a concrete platform that measures 62 feet square. The outside is quite weather beaten but well maintained. Inside there is more room than it would appear and the condition is very well kept.

Engineman 1st Class Kenneth Crowe said, "the first two months and the last two months at the lighthouse, are the longest two months you'll ever spend in your life."

The lighthouse is located in Green Bay, about 12 miles south of the Escanaba Yacht Harbor, in a depth of about 20 feet of water. It is operated by the U. S. Coast Guard and serves as an aid to navagation .

Early every Wednesday morning, weather allowing, the Coast Guard departs from the Escanaba Yacht Harbor to the lighthouse, loaded with supplies, mail, and relief crewmen.

The boat assigned to the Escanaba station, Coast Guard 30376, is a diesel powered craft that will reach a speed of about 18 knots, or 20 m.p.h.

The roar of the engine is deafening and the boat is showing it's age, as one can see by the many layers of white and gray paint that peek out around the seams and bolts.

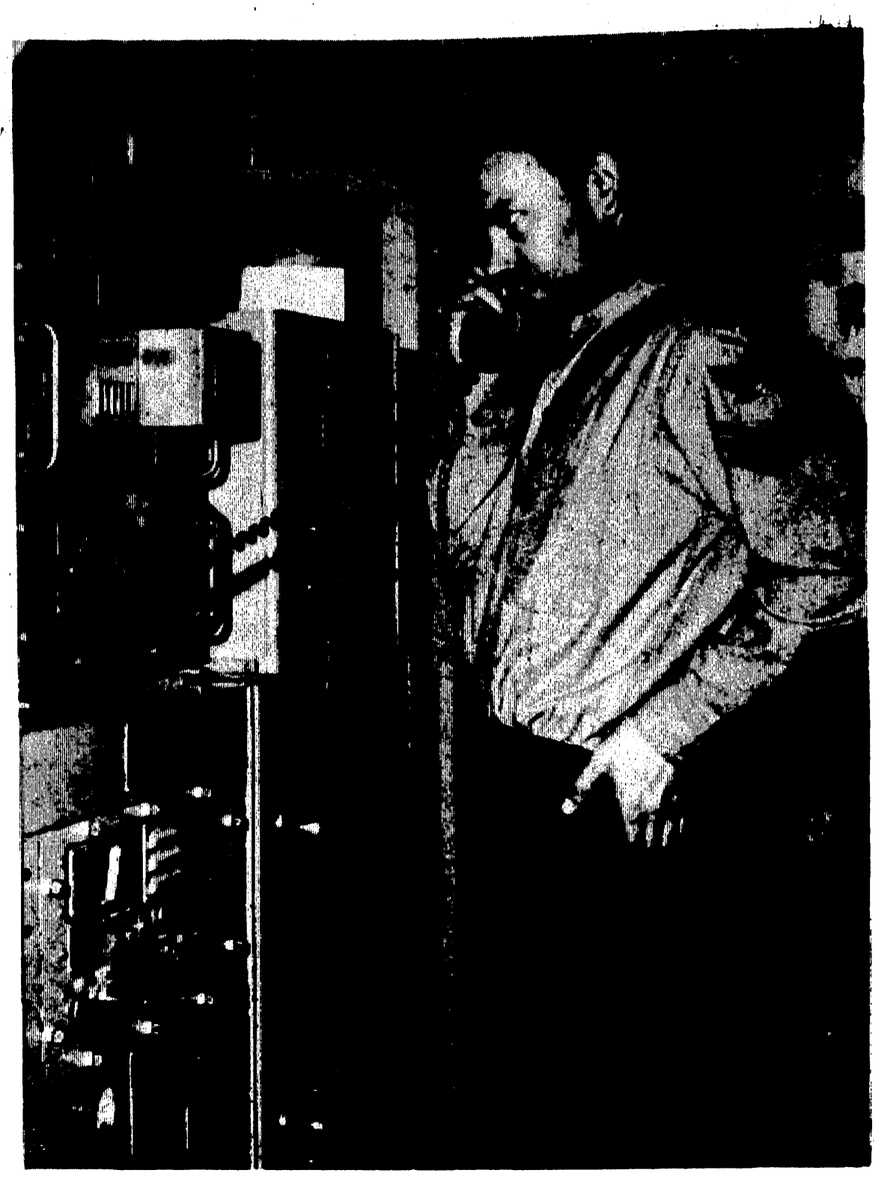

The boat proves to be quite adequate however, and very dependable.

During normal weather, a one-way trip to the lighthouse takes about 45 minutes.

The Coast Guard tries to maintain a three-man crew at the lighthouse, each man averaging two weeks on duty and one week off.

While stationed at the lighthouse the men help to pass the time by reading books, watching TV, putting puzzles together, playing table tennis, doing hoggy-craft or whatever suits their fancy, in addition to cooking and performing their assigned duties.

When asked how he liked serving in the Coast Guard, Seaman Jeffery Wee said, "I didn't know exactly what I was getting into but now that I've been in a while, I really like it."

RICHARD MAIER, fireman, bottom left, takes to the privacy of the sleeping quarters in the lighthouse, to catch up on his letter reading after mail call.

EUGENE NADEAU, Engineman 1st, top right, transmits a message from the lighthouse switchboard. Coast Guardsmen use the radio equipment to communicate with vessels and shore installations.

Pack Schedule Has New Look

GREEN BAY — The Green Bay Packers, who thought they had an unbalanced schedule last year when they played their last seven games in wintry northern weather, will learn the true meaning of imbalance in 1970.

The National Football League announced its schedule Monday night, one which for the first time involves inter-league play between the NFL and the former American Football League. The two leagues, now merged, will henceforth be known as the National Football Conference (NFC) and American Football Conference (AFC).

Green Bay will play seven of its first nine games at home—either in Green Bay or Milwaukee — and all its last five on the road. Detroit, by contrast, will shoot for the same Central Division championship by playing four of its last five games at home.

Same Alignment

The Packers are again with the Lions, Minnesota Vikings and Chicago Bears in the Central Division of the NFC.

Green Bay's three games against AFC teams will hardly seem like new times. Two of the three AFC opponents, Pittsburgh and Baltimore, were members of the NFL last season. The third game, against the San Diego Chargers, will be played in California, where the Packers have been frequent visitors.

The Packers will have some unsettled practice weeks, with three weekday games. The game in San Diego Oct. 12, and one against Baltimore in Milwaukee Nov. 9, will be Monday night games, televised nationally as part of the new contract with the American Broadcasting Co.

Thanksgiving Game

In addition, the Packers will play the Dallas Cowboys at Dallas on Thanksgiving Day, Nov. 26, starting at 2:30 p.m. The game will mark Green Bay's first Turkey Day business since Vince Lombardi ended the team's longtime participation in the Lions' Thanksgiving show in 1964.

In addition to Baltimore, Milwaukee opponents will be the defending champion Minnesota Vikings, in a 3 p.m. game Oct. 4, and the Philadelphia Eagles, Oct. 25.

Green Bay opponents will include the Lions, Sept. 20, the Atlanta Falcons, Sept. 27, the Los Angeles Rams, Oct. 18 and the Chicago Bears, Nov. 15.

Gilt Edge-Bosch Wins Keg Title

The Gilt Edge-Bosch team of the Bowl-A-Rama American League captured the league championship Wednesday night, defeating King's Bar in a three-game rolloff by 16 pins, 2,666 to 2,650.

Dave Andrews paced the winners with a 616 series. Al Adams rolled 610 for King's.

Gilt Edge-Bosch had won first half honors in the league, while King's finished on top in the second half. Besides Andrews, bowling for the winning team were Bill Wanic, Tom Kroll, Norm Dahlke and Charley Meyer. Bowling for King's were Ron Parlatto, Dwaine Menard, George Peterson, Steve King and Adams.

NBA All-Star Team Selected

NEW YORK (AP) — Jerry West, Willis Reed, Walt Frazier and Billy Cunningham, a quartet of familiar names, and newcomer Connie Hawkins were named today to the National Basketball Association's 1969-70 All-Star team.

West, Los Angeles' high-scoring guard, picked for the seventh time, was the only unanimous selection announced by Commissioner Walter Kennedy. The squad was selected by a panel of sports writers and sportscasters in the league's 14 member cities.

Reed, center on New York's Eastern Division champions, and Frazier, the Knicks' aggressive guard, made it for the first time. Cunningham, Philadelphia's standout forward, made it for the second time.

Hawkins has the distinction of making all-star teams in both the NBA and the American Basketball Association. The catquick forward was on all-star teams in the ABA while with the Pittsburgh and Minnesota franchises and was the league's most valuable player last year.

Oscar Robertson, Cincinnati's longtime star recently traded to Milwaukee, missed the first team for the first time since he turned pro in 1960.

More people get more news from newspapers than all other sources combined.

Wabung Meeting

There will be a Wabung Baseball meeting on Wednesday, April 29, at 7:30 p.m. at the Escanaba Daily Press. All team representatives are asked to be present. Any new team interested in joining the league is also invited.

Unbeaten Bruins Ruffle Hawks' Feathers Again

By The Associated Press

Wayne, Wayne go away, please come back another day? If the Chicago Black Hawks want to parody the familiar refrain today, you couldn't really blame them.

Wayne Carleton and Wayne Cashman contributed key goals Thursday night to lead Boston over Chicago 5-2 for a commanding 3-0 lead in their National Hockey League playoff series.

The best-of-7 East Division finals continue Sunday in Boston.

In West Division play, Pittsburgh downed St. Louis 3-2 to cut the Blues' margin to 2-1 in their best-of-7 set. They resume Sunday in Pittsburgh.

After Chicago took a 1-0 lead in the first period on Cliff Koroll's goal, Carleton took a pass from Eddie Westfall and tied the score on a 20-footer at 8:50.

Chicago Takes Early Lead

The Teams traded goals, then Cashman shot the Bruins into a never-headed 3-2 lead a little more than six minutes into the second period.

Another key contribution to Boston's big victory was an outstanding save by Bruins' goalie Gerry Cheevers early in the third stanza.

The Bruins were leading 4-2 in the early minutes of the final session when Keith Magnuson took a pass from Stan Mikita, came in all alone and unleashed a point-blank shot at Cheevers.

But the Boston goalie got his glove in front of the shot and the save seemed to take the sting out of the Black Hawks.

"That was a big stop . . . a big stop," exulted Boston Coach Harry Sinden. "We weren't playing all that well. If Magnuson had got that goal, I don't know if we could have snapped out of it and held them.

"If you want to talk about a turning point, I guess that was one all right."

Chicago Coach Billy Reh agreed: "Unbelievable that it wasn't in the net! One of the greatest saves I've seen. That's the kind of play when all you can do is throw your glove up."

Pittsburgh Wins

Rookie Michel Briere, a 150-pound center, scored a goal and added an assist as Pittsburgh scored three goals in the first two periods, then held off last-period thunder by St. Louis.

"Altogether I think it was the best game we've played," said Briere. "If we get them Sunday, we'll win it in four games."

He also said he was happier with his performance in this game than any all season.

"I caught them on defense several times," he said. "I was just as happy about that as the offensive play."

Talking about Briere, Coach Scotty Bowman of St. Louis said: "We knew he was a good hockey player. He's pretty fast. Looks much better than any other offensive player they have because they are mostly a defensive team."

The Penguins dominated the Blues early as Briere scored the third goal in the second period, and gave Pittsburgh a 3-0 lead. Then Larry Keenan scored two lightning goals in the third stanza, but it was too little, too late.

Crusaders Win 1st Golf Meet

MENOMINEE — The Holy Name Crusaders were victorious in their opening golf match of the season Thursday afternoon when they upended teams from Escanaba and Menominee in a triangular meet at the Riverside Country Club.

Kim Agneberg was medalist for the meet with a 38, while Brian Douglas, just a freshman, topped the Crusaders with a 42. Ken Peterson and Mike Beck paced the Eskymos with 45's.

Team scores:

Holy Name — Brian Douglas 42, Mike Douglas 43, Pat Manning 44, Don LeMire 45, Steve Kleiman 45, Bob Kleiman 45, Dave Fassbender 48, Ron DeGrand 54, Jim Kroll 58 and Kelly O'Connell 62.

Menominee — Kim Agneberg 38, Pete Smith 41, Fred Hofer 41, Bill Sorneson 47, Dave Gustman 47, Lonnie Larson 51, Rick Kaufman 55, Rob Mallgren 56, Gary Cadieu 56, Bill Dufrane 57.

Escanaba — Mike Beck 45, Ken Peterson 45, Randy Eis 47, Steve Ohman 48, Gene Olsen 49, Terry Mulvaney 49, Tom Shaw 52, John Erickson 54, Steve Cerasoli 54 and Bruce Turner 57.

Highland Slates Twilight League Opening Tuesday

Hazen Hengesh, president of the Highland Golf Club, announced today that the men's Twilight League will officially open Tuesday, April 28.

Work has been carried on over the entire course and the greens have been cut for the first time this year and are in excellent condition. The heavy rains this past week have created a water condition on holes 8 and 9, but the remaining 16 holes are in very good condition, Hengesh said.

There will be no formal matchmaking and golfers are asked to make up their own foursomes. Plans will be made for the league formation and anyone interested in playing in the league may sign up Tuesday.

Dinner will be served for the golfers on Tuesday.

Player Leads In Golf Tournament

RANCHO LA COSTA, Calif. (AP)—"When you're playing for money," said Gary Player, "golf is a game of sorrows."

The tough little South African waxed philosophical Thursday after cutting out a four-under-par 68 and taking the first-round lead in the $150,000 Tournament of Champions.

"When you're playing for fun, it's fun," Player said." "But when you're playing for money, well, that's something else. You always think you can do better.

"At the end of a tournament, there's only one man who is happy. Everyone else is unhappy."

Player, the defending titleholder, held a stroke lead over British Open champion Tony Crampton going into today's second round as the foreign contingent dominated opening-day play in this prestige-laden event.

Three-time champion Arnold Palmer headed a group of four tied at 70, two-under-par on the plush, 7,114-yard La Costa Country Club course. The others are Dale Douglass, Lee Trevino and Frank Beard.

Jack Nicklaus and Masters champion Billy Casper were in a group at 71.

Player, one of four men to sweep all the world's major golf titles, had it six-under-par until he bogeyed two of the last three holes.

He had three deuces and reeled off one string of four consecutive birdies.

"I could have had a 63 and should have had a 66 at the very worst," he said. "I'm playing the best golf of my career.

"I was hitting it right at the flag on every shot, just knocking it stiff."

He missed a 12-foot birdie putt on the first hole, then canned a twisting 25-footer on the third.

Player missed birdie putts of eight and three feet on the fifth and sixth, then put a five iron three feet from the flag on seven.

He started his birdie string with an eight-footer on the ninth, canned a 12-footer on the next and rifled an iron within six feet of the hole on the next.

And he got it up and down from a trap for a birdie four on the next

Yanks Rip Senators Behind Cater's Bat

By The Associated Press

See-saws are for kids but Danny Cater rode a dandy one in Washington this week.

Cater is one of the new-look hitters who are supposed to make New York Yankee fans remember the good old days. And he did a pretty good job of just that Thursday night, ripping four hits and driving in three runs in New York's 11-6 romp over Washington.

It was the third time in the four-game series against the Senators that Cater had collected three or more hits. But oh, that fourth game. Danny was 0-for-8 in the 18-inning marathon Wednesday night.

Cater went into the Washington series batting .268 on 11 hits for 41 tries—adequate but hardly exciting. Then three hits Monday and three more Tuesday boosted his average to .340—much nicer company.

Carter Up And Down

Just as Cater was enjoying the see-saw ride up, he went down but fast. The 0-for-8 marathon horsecollar cost him 47 points and he was back down in the mundane world of .293 hitters. Then came Thursday's 4-for-6 and back up to .328.

Cater and Bobby Murcer handled a hefty share of the Yankee offense with seven of New York's 15 hits. The Yankees also collected 10 walks.

New York hopped into a 5-0 lead but it was wiped out by the Senators with three of Washington's runs coming on a booming Frank Howard homer.

Then the Yankees pecked away, rebuilding their lead and rookie John Cumberland came out of the bullpen to earn his first major league victory with 6 1-3 innings of airtight relief.

Pirates' Fourth Straight

In the only other games played Thursday, Pittsburgh downed Atlanta 8-6 and Chicago topped Minnesota 7-5. The scheduled Cincinnati at St. Louis game was rained out.

Bill Mazeroski's three-run double keyed a five-run Pittsburgh explosion in the seventh inning and then the Pirates survived an Orlando Cepeda grand slam to beat the Braves.

Manny Sanguillen drove in three runs for the Pirates with a homer and a single and Hank Aaron hit his 560th career homer for the Braves.

It was Pittsburgh's fourth straight victory and the sixth straight loss for the Braves.

Bobby Knoop cracked a home run and Minnesota reliever Ron Perranoski's throwing error gave Chicago two runs, helping the White Sox trim the Twins.

Knoop's eighth inning homer tied the score at 4-4 for Chicago and then the White Sox scored three more runs—two of them when Perranoski threw Luis Aparicio's bunt into left field. Aparicio raced all the way to third on the play and scored a moment later on a sacrifice fly.

Little League Sign-Up Slated

Spartan Athlete To Have Surgery

EAST LANSING (AP) — A knee injury has thrown Michigan State freshman football player Jesse Williams of Bellefontaine, Ohio, out of action for the year.

Corrective surgery was required on Williams right knee after it was injured during a team scrimmage earlier this week.

Williams, a halfback, suffered torn ligaments in the knee, reported team physician James Feurig.

Williams had been a star in early Spartan drills and was looked upon to give the team's running offense a boost this fall.

Seven Veterans Bolster Rockets

The Rapid River Rockets will open their 1970 track season on April 28 in a triangular meet at Manistique. The Rockets will face the host Emeralds and the Big Bay de Noc Black Bears in the meet.

Rapid River, which has won the Central League Conference for the last nine years straight, will have seven returning lettermen back this season.

Bernie Olson, who is in his 13th year as track coach of the Rockets, said that he will have a fairly well-balanced team again this season, but not the depth that they have had in other previous years.

Returning veterans will be Dan Safford, who broke the conference record last season in the long jump and is running in both the 100 and 220 dashes; Dave Holmgren, pole vaulter and half miler; Dale Pasi in the mile; Charles Lassen in the 440 and John Deneau in the two mile run.

Other letter winners include Jeff Boyer, who broke the conference record in the pole vault last season with a jump of 11 feet 6 inches and he will also be running in the hurdles. Dale Morin, who injured his knee last fall is a questionable starter for the defending Class D Regional Champs.

The Rapid River track schedule is as follows:

April 28—at Manistique
May 12—Central League at Escanaba.
May 16—Regional Meet at Escanaba
May 18—at Gwinn
May 23—U. P. Finals at Marquette

Pack Schedule Has New Look

GREEN BAY — The Green Bay Packers, who thought they had an unbalanced schedule last year when they played their last seven games in wintry northern weather, will learn the true meaning of imbalance in 1970.

The National Football League announced its schedule Monday night, one which for the first time involves inter-league play between the NFL and the former American Football League. The two leagues, now merged, will henceforth be known as the National Football Conference (NFC) and American Football Conference (AFC).

Green Bay will play seven of its first nine games at home—either in Green Bay or Milwaukee — and all its last five on the road. Detroit, by contrast, will shoot for the same Central Division championship by playing four of its last five games at home.

Same Alignment

The Packers are again with the Lions, Minnesota Vikings and Chicago Bears in the Central Division of the NFC.

Green Bay's three games against AFC teams will hardly seem like new times. Two of the three AFC opponents, Pittsburgh and Baltimore, were members of the NFL last season. The third game, against the San Diego Chargers, will be played in California, where the Packers have been frequent visitors.

The Packers will have some unsettled practice weeks, with three weekday games. The game in San Diego Oct. 12, and one against Baltimore in Milwaukee Nov. 9, will be Monday night games, televised nationally as part of the new contract with the American Broadcasting Co.

Thanksgiving Game

In addition, the Packers will play the Dallas Cowboys at Dallas on Thanksgiving Day, Nov. 26, starting at 2:30 p.m. The game will mark Green Bay's first Turkey Day business since Vince Lombardi ended the team's longtime participation in the Lions' Thanksgiving show in 1964.

In addition to Baltimore, Milwaukee opponents will be the defending champion Minnesota Vikings, in a 3 p.m. game Oct. 4, and the Philadelphia Eagles, Oct. 25.

Green Bay opponents will include the Lions, Sept. 20, the Atlanta Falcons, Sept. 27, the Los Angeles Rams, Oct. 18 and the Chicago Bears, Nov. 15.

Gilt Edge-Bosch Wins Keg Title

The Gilt Edge-Bosch team of the Bowl-A-Rama American League captured the league championship Wednesday night, defeating King's Bar in a three-game rolloff by 16 pins, 2,666 to 2,650.

Dave Andrews paced the winners with a 616 series. Al Adams rolled 610 for King's.

Gilt Edge-Bosch had won first half honors in the league, while King's finished on top in the second half. Besides Andrews, bowling for the winning team were Bill Wanic, Tom Kroll, Norm Dahlke and Charley Meyer. Bowling for King's were Ron Parlatto, Dwaine Menard, George Peterson, Steve King and Adams.

NBA All-Star Team Selected

NEW YORK (AP) — Jerry West, Willis Reed, Walt Frazier and Billy Cunningham, a quartet of familiar names, and newcomer Connie Hawkins were named today to the National Basketball Association's 1969-70 All-Star team.

West, Los Angeles' high-scoring guard, picked for the seventh time, was the only unanimous selection announced by Commissioner Walter Kennedy. The squad was selected by a panel of sports writers and sportscasters in the league's 14 member cities.

Reed, center on New York's Eastern Division champions, and Frazier, the Knicks' aggressive guard, made it for the first time. Cunningham, Philadelphia's standout forward, made it for the second time.

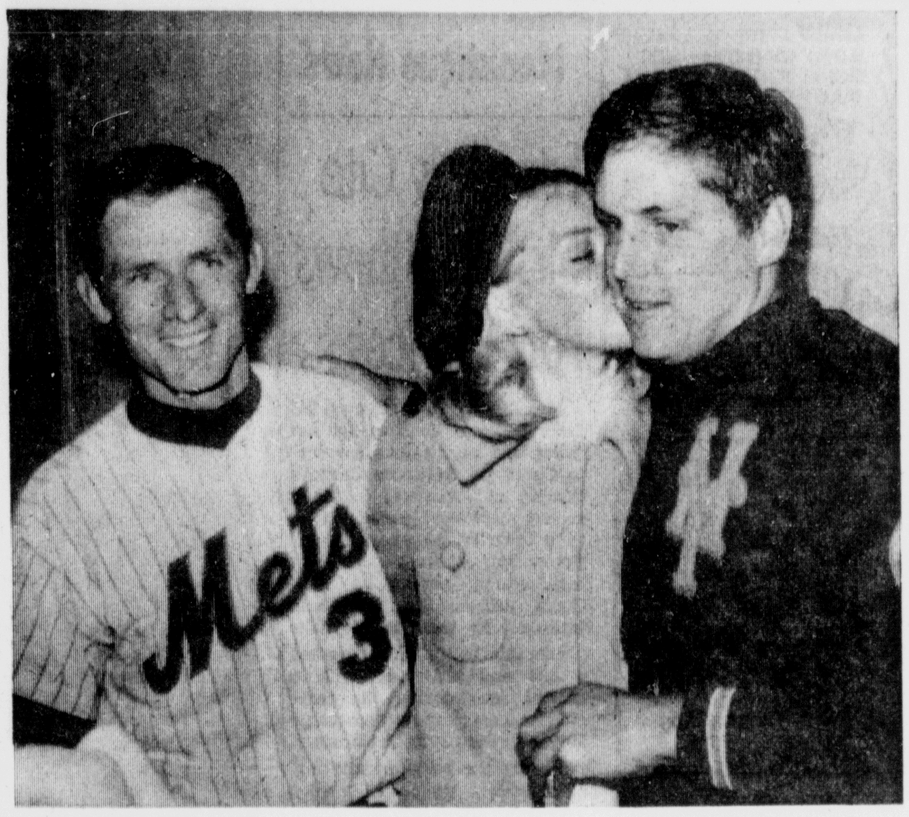

Hawkins has the distinction of making all-star teams in both the NBA and the American Basketball Association. The catquick forward was on all-star teams in the ABA while with the Pittsburgh and Minnesota franchises and was the league's most valuable player last year.

Oscar Robertson, Cincinnati's longtime star recently traded to Milwaukee, missed the first team for the first time since he turned pro in 1960.

More people get more news from newspapers than all other sources combined.

Wabung Meeting

There will be a Wabung Baseball meeting on Wednesday, April 29, at 7:30 p.m. at the Escanaba Daily Press. All team representatives are asked to be present. Any new team interested in joining the league is also invited.

THE FRUITS OF VICTORY — Nancy Seaver rewards her husband, Tom for setting a pitching record with ten straight strikeouts and tying the major league record with 19 strikeouts in one game against the San Diego Padres in New York Wednesday. Seaver's teammate, Bud Harrelson, left, was also awarded a kiss since it was he who drove in the third inning run that took the New York Mets to a 2-1 victory over the Padres. (AP Wirephoto)

Unbeaten Bruins Ruffle Hawks' Feathers Again

By The Associated Press

Wayne, Wayne go away, please come back another day? If the Chicago Black Hawks want to parody the familiar refrain today, you couldn't really blame them.

Wayne Carleton and Wayne Cashman contributed key goals Thursday night to lead Boston over Chicago 5-2 for a commanding 3-0 lead in their National Hockey League playoff series.

The best-of-7 East Division finals continue Sunday in Boston.

In West Division play, Pittsburgh downed St. Louis 3-2 to cut the Blues' margin to 2-1 in their best-of-7 set. They resume Sunday in Pittsburgh.

After Chicago took a 1-0 lead in the first period on Cliff Koroll's goal, Carleton took a pass from Eddie Westfall and tied the score on a 20-footer at 8:50.

Chicago Takes Early Lead

The Teams traded goals, then Cashman shot the Bruins into a never-headed 3-2 lead a little more than six minutes into the second period.

Another key contribution to Boston's big victory was an outstanding save by Bruins' goalie Gerry Cheevers early in the third stanza.

The Bruins were leading 4-2 in the early minutes of the final session when Keith Magnuson took a pass from Stan Mikita, came in all alone and unleashed a point-blank shot at Cheevers.

But the Boston goalie got his glove in front of the shot and the save seemed to take the sting out of the Black Hawks.

"That was a big stop . . . a big stop," exulted Boston Coach Harry Sinden. "We weren't playing all that well. If Magnuson had got that goal, I don't know if we could have snapped out of it and held them.

"If you want to talk about a turning point, I guess that was one all right."

Chicago Coach Billy Reh agreed: "Unbelievable that it wasn't in the net! One of the greatest saves I've seen. That's the kind of play when all you can do is throw your glove up."

Pittsburgh Wins

Rookie Michel Briere, a 150-pound center, scored a goal and added an assist as Pittsburgh scored three goals in the first two periods, then held off last-period thunder by St. Louis.

"Altogether I think it was the best game we've played," said Briere. "If we get them Sunday, we'll win it in four games."

He also said he was happier with his performance in this game than any all season.

"I caught them on defense several times," he said. "I was just as happy about that as the offensive play."

Talking about Briere, Coach Scotty Bowman of St. Louis said: "We knew he was a good hockey player. He's pretty fast. Looks much better than any other offensive player they have because they are mostly a defensive team."

The Penguins dominated the Blues early as Briere scored the third goal in the second period, and gave Pittsburgh a 3-0 lead. Then Larry Keenan scored two lightning goals in the third stanza, but it was too little, too late.

Highland Slates Twilight League Opening Tuesday

Hazen Hengesh, president of the Highland Golf Club, announced today that the men's Twilight League will officially open Tuesday, April 28.

Work has been carried on over the entire course and the greens have been cut for the first time this year and are in excellent condition. The heavy rains this past week have created a water condition on holes 8 and 9, but the remaining 16 holes are in very good condition, Hengesh said.

There will be no formal matchmaking and golfers are asked to make up their own foursomes. Plans will be made for the league formation and anyone interested in playing in the league may sign up Tuesday.

Dinner will be served for the golfers on Tuesday.

Player Leads In Golf Tournament

RANCHO LA COSTA, Calif. (AP)—"When you're playing for money," said Gary Player, "golf is a game of sorrows."

The tough little South African waxed philosophical Thursday after cutting out a four-under-par 68 and taking the first-round lead in the $150,000 Tournament of Champions.

"When you're playing for fun, it's fun," Player said." "But when you're playing for money, well, that's something else. You always think you can do better.

"At the end of a tournament, there's only one man who is happy. Everyone else is unhappy."

Player, the defending titleholder, held a stroke lead over British Open champion Tony Crampton going into today's second round as the foreign contingent dominated opening-day play in this prestige-laden event.

Three-time champion Arnold Palmer headed a group of four tied at 70, two-under-par on the plush, 7,114-yard La Costa Country Club course. The others are Dale Douglass, Lee Trevino and Frank Beard.

Jack Nicklaus and Masters champion Billy Casper were in a group at 71.

Player, one of four men to sweep all the world's major golf titles, had it six-under-par until he bogeyed two of the last three holes.

He had three deuces and reeled off one string of four consecutive birdies.

"I could have had a 63 and should have had a 66 at the very worst," he said. "I'm playing the best golf of my career.

"I was hitting it right at the flag on every shot, just knocking it stiff."

He missed a 12-foot birdie putt on the first hole, then canned a twisting 25-footer on the third.

Player missed birdie putts of eight and three feet on the fifth and sixth, then put a five iron three feet from the flag on seven.

He started his birdie string with an eight-footer on the ninth, canned a 12-footer on the next and rifled an iron within six feet of the hole on the next.

And he got it up and down from a trap for a birdie four on the next

Yanks Rip Senators Behind Cater's Bat

By The Associated Press

See-saws are for kids but Danny Cater rode a dandy one in Washington this week.

Cater is one of the new-look hitters who are supposed to make New York Yankee fans remember the good old days. And he did a pretty good job of just that Thursday night, ripping four hits and driving in three runs in New York's 11-6 romp over Washington.

It was the third time in the four-game series against the Senators that Cater had collected three or more hits. But oh, that fourth game. Danny was 0-for-8 in the 18-inning marathon Wednesday night.

Cater went into the Washington series batting .268 on 11 hits for 41 tries—adequate but hardly exciting. Then three hits Monday and three more Tuesday boosted his average to .340—much nicer company.

Carter Up And Down

Just as Cater was enjoying the see-saw ride up, he went down but fast. The 0-for-8 marathon horsecollar cost him 47 points and he was back down in the mundane world of .293 hitters. Then came Thursday's 4-for-6 and back up to .328.

Cater and Bobby Murcer handled a hefty share of the Yankee offense with seven of New York's 15 hits. The Yankees also collected 10 walks.

New York hopped into a 5-0 lead but it was wiped out by the Senators with three of Washington's runs coming on a booming Frank Howard homer.

Then the Yankees pecked away, rebuilding their lead and rookie John Cumberland came out of the bullpen to earn his first major league victory with 6 1-3 innings of airtight relief.

Pirates' Fourth Straight

In the only other games played Thursday, Pittsburgh downed Atlanta 8-6 and Chicago topped Minnesota 7-5. The scheduled Cincinnati at St. Louis game was rained out.

Bill Mazeroski's three-run double keyed a five-run Pittsburgh explosion in the seventh inning and then the Pirates survived an Orlando Cepeda grand slam to beat the Braves.

Manny Sanguillen drove in three runs for the Pirates with a homer and a single and Hank Aaron hit his 560th career homer for the Braves.

It was Pittsburgh's fourth straight victory and the sixth straight loss for the Braves.

Bobby Knoop cracked a home run and Minnesota reliever Ron Perranoski's throwing error gave Chicago two runs, helping the White Sox trim the Twins.

Knoop's eighth inning homer tied the score at 4-4 for Chicago and then the White Sox scored three more runs—two of them when Perranoski threw Luis Aparicio's bunt into left field. Aparicio raced all the way to third on the play and scored a moment later on a sacrifice fly.

We need a man (or woman), and a good one, to serve John Hancock policy owners. How does it pay? Well, we have two men who earned $10,000 in commissions in their first year. And that's only the beginning.

If you'r a doer, mature, educated, have had no previous life insurance sales experience, and are looking for a truly rewarding career (in every sense) with no relocation, then write or give us a call right now.

'Genetic Engineering' May Be Answer To Mental Retardation

By FRANK CAREY
AP Science Writer

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Scientists are studying daring concepts involving "genetic engineering" as part of their quest to conquer such inherited disorders as cystic fibrosis and some of the maladies that can cause mental retardation.

Conceding their ideas "approach science fiction," researchers attending an unusual conference here this month said developments like these are conceivable some time in the future:

A scientist in a hospital laboratory would "feed a certain synthetic chemical to a virus that is relatively harmless to man.

Implanted In Womb

Then he would implant the virus inside the womb of a pregnant woman in such a way that the virus ultimately would reach the developing embryo. It would then release inside fetal cells its chemical cargo consisting of man-made genes—artificial versions of the basic units of heredity which researchers are now trying to develop.

In this case, the virus would in effect be an emergency messenger boy carrying a gene which pre-natal analysis shows is missing or defective in the unborn child—an abnormality that otherwise would result in the child being born with systic fibrosis, a dreaded glandular disease.

Another Technique

Using another technique, surgeons would implant tiny glass beads in the womb of a pregnant woman. The hollow beads would be filled with an enzyme —a chemical trigger for a vital process—that is known to be missing from the developing embryo.

Through a tiny opening in the beads, the enzyme would slowly be released into the circulation of the embryo—and thereby prevent the child from being born with a hereditary metabolic disease known as phenylketonuria —or 'PKU' for short. Unless detected and treatment begun soon after birth, PKU can lead to mental retardation.

Techniques Described

These two conceptual techniques—the messenger boy viruses and the enzyme-releasing glass beads—were described by Dr. John H. Menkes of the University of California Medical Center, Los Angeles, at a special symposium on "Clinical Aspects of Inherited Disorders" at the University of Alabama Medical Center.

He said the ideas "approach science fiction," but added that researchers already are giving them serious thought.

Menkes indicated that when and if the methods are perfected, they would first be applied to treat children born with genetic defects.

But Dr. Layne H. Finley of the University of Alabama Medical Center told a reporter it's conceivable they ultimately could be applied in the pre-natal stage, within the womb.

Eye Early Application

The conference was designed to acquaint everyday practicing physicians—and dentists—with the latest developments and future prospects in the relatively new field of medical genetics.

The field embraces some 1,500 genetic diseases and disorders, ranging from Mongolism to color-blindness; from muscular dystrophy to hemophilia; from the "cry-of-the-cat disease" whose infant victims cry like cats to the controversial "XYY chromosome syndrome" that has been found in some criminals.

Other Highlights

Other conference highlights included:

1. New evidence that a technique involving tapping fluid from the womb of a pregnant woman—and allowing pre-natal analysis of heredity-carrying chromosomes of the embryo—can save the lives of significant numbers of unborn children. These are children who might otherwise be considered candidates for therapeutic abortions because their mothers had had previous defective children or were otherwise deemed "high risks" for producing others. The same technique—called amniocentesis—can be used for pre-natal determination of the child's sex.

2. Further evidence that heavy exposure of pregnant

CAMBODIAN SOLDIER advances through the smoldering rubble of the Cambodian town of Saang Thursday after the Viet Cong had left after occupying the town since Sunday. Fear Red Overthrow Of Cambodian Rulers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some top Pentagon officials are saying privately only swift and substantial military aid can prevent a Communist overthrow of the new Cambodian government.

By the same token, some hold the view that the Cambodian situation, if exploited, might provide powerful leverage against Viet Cong and North Vietnamese forces using Cambodian territory as sanctuary from the Vietnam war.

This assessment became known Thursday after the White House disclosed Cambodia is receiving several thousand captured enemy weapons from South Vietnam—with U.S. approval.

The acknowledgement appeared certain to spark controversy in Congress where some members say aid to Cambodia would expand American involvement in Southeast Asia.

The White House said the go-ahead for shipment of AK47 automatic rifles—retrieved from the battlefield in South Vietnam —did not represent the Nixon administration's response to Cambodia's "extensive" request for U.S. arms.

That request, the White House said, is still under consideration.

Some high military officers, it was learned, favor lending a quick helping hand to the government of Premier Lon Nol which deposed Prince Norodom Sihanouk several weeks ago.

The next four or five weeks, it was said, pose a critical stage for the Lon Nol government. With aid during that period, the Lon Nol forces would have perhaps a 50-50 chance of seizing the initiative before the seasonal rainy season, it was said. After that, the weather would work to the advantage of the better trained Communist forces, sources indicated.

Some U.S. military officers expressed optimism that, benefitied quickly with new arms, the Cambodian government could rally its people against the North Vietnamese, a traditional foe.

This, in turn, might curb North Vietnamese operations from Cambodia across the border into South Vietnam.

Besides the possibility of U.S. arms aid, American officials are known to be exploring the idea of an international agreement to provide help to Cambodia to insure its neutrality.

S. Vietnamese Preparing For Big 'Invasion'

SAIGON (AP) — The South Vietnamese army is putting more artillery and troops along several hundred miles of the Cambodian border in preparation for more armed forays into Cambodia in pursuit of North Vietnamese and Viet Cong troops, informed Vietnamese sources said today.

"We have gone into Cambodia many times," said one source. "We expect to continue. We are paying more attention to the western side of South Vietnam. We are reinforcing it with more artillery. There are more air strikes along the border. We are reinforcing our outposts."

The buildup is heaviest in South Vietnam's 3rd Corps Tactical Zone, an area of 10,000 square miles sharing 231 miles of border with Cambodia. The border area runs in an arc from 35 miles west of Saigon to 100 miles northeast of the capital.

The sources estimate 40,000 to 50,000 North Vietnamese and Viet Cong troops are in eastern Cambodia. One source said Cambodian troops had withdrawn from all their outposts along the border because they were "afraid of the Viet Cong and North Vietnamese."

This source said there is no official agreement between South Vietnamese and Cambodian authorities for South Vietnamese forces to cross into Cambodia.

Anti-Cancer Drug Testing Approved

NEW YORK (AP) — The Food and Drug Administration has given approval for the testing on humans of a highly controversial anticancer drug, one the FDA has long refused to license.

The drug is Laetrile, the proprietary name for amygdalin, a chemical derived from apricot pits.

Great Benefits Claimed

While the drug's supporters claim great benefits among cancer patients, the American Cancer Society lists Laetrile among "unproven" drugs and says its studies find no objective evidence of benefit from it. Other cancer authorities have called it "dubious" or "worthless."

Under federal law, the FDA has banned sale and use of Laetrile because it has not gone through the process of legal and orderly testing to show that it is effective and safe, an FDA spokesman said.

The FDA gave permission for the first step toward any approval—the clinical testing—by granting a number, in this case No. 6,734, to an Investigative New Drug—IND—application filed on April 6 by the McNaughton Foundation of Sausalito, Calif.

No Judgment Made

This does not mean the FDA has made any judgment as to the worth or safety of the drug, the FDA official said. It means only that the proposal to investigate it in humans met certain requirements stipulated by the FDA.

The FDA spokesman said the IND application, like others, may be reviewed more fully and permission for the clinical testing could still be withdrawn if cause is found. Meanwhile, the clinical testing can begin at any time.

To Conduct Studies

The drug is being made legally available only for the clinical studies, not for general use among any cancer patients.

In Sausalito, Andrew McNaughton, head of the foundation which sponsors and promotes development of Laetrile, said "half a dozen top-flight physicians" will conduct the studies, involving more than 100 patients.

Word of the approval of the application came from Dr. Dean Burk, a well-known cancer researcher, who is head of the cytochemistry section, Laboratory of Biochemistry, National Cancer Institute.

Burk says he thinks Laetrile has a very high safety factor and shows "potential" for treating human cancers. He wrote to this effect in a letter last August to James Farmer, assistant secretary for administration of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

Farmer says he had asked Burk for an opinion as a scientist who had experience in animal testing of the drug.

While officials of the National Cancer Institute were not immediately available for comment, their associates made it clear that controversy exists concerning the merits of Laetrile.

The drug was developed and used over the last 50 years by the late Dr. Ernst T. Krebs Sr., and Dr. Ernst T. Krebs Jr., of San Francisco.

The time between the granting of an IND application and final approval of any drug by the FDA can take years. The clinical testing is a first step toward demonstrating to the satisfaction of the FDA that the drug is safe and does what it is claimed for it.

Threat Slows Marine Unit Withdrawals

WASHINGTON (AP) — Withdrawal of the remaining U.S. Marine Division from South Vietnam may be delayed because of an enemy threat against the northern most area of the country.

There have been strong indications for weeks that the 1st Marine Division was ticketed to come out of Vietnam as part of the next stage of U.S. troop cutbacks.

Pentagon sources say objections have been raised by some military leaders on grounds that early pullout of the Marine division would seriously weaken defenses in the northern I Corps.

The matter has been under discussion, Pentagon sources said, indicating the 1st Marine Division's departure could be held up for a time.

Sources hinted the pace of the overall troop withdrawal may be throttled down for some weeks, perhaps until it can be determined whether the North Vietnamese intend to mount a spring offfensive.

Recent intelligence reports have told of several North Vietnamese regiments moving into I Corps from Laos, and there is concern over the continuing presence of enemy troop concentrations above the demilitarized zone.

Condemned

ROBERT K. BEAUSOLEIL, 22, doesn't look very upset as he leaves court in Los Angeles after being sentenced to die in the gas chamber. He was convicted in the murder of Gary Hinman, 34, a musician who had befriended Charles Manson, leader of the "Manson Family" hippie cult. The Hinman killing is believed to be one of eight slayings involving Manson and followers.

Ending Draft No Breeze For Nixon

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon's plan to abolish the draft has drawn a cold reception from key members of Congress, and prospects for early clearance of his proposal to abolish college deferments are in doubt.

Although the college exemption plan set forth by the President Thursday was promised an early hearing in the Senate, House Armed Services Committee Chairman L. Mendal Rivers, D-S.C., said he planned no action on draft reform this year, only a review.

Nixon asked the authority to end educational exemptions in a message to Congress and announced he was abolishing on his own future occupational, agricultural and parental deferments. Only the student deferments require congressional approval.

At the same time Nixon announced a plan to begin phasing out the draft in July 1971, when the draft law expires and shift to an all-volunteer army.

John C. Stennis, D-Miss., chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, said he does not think an end to the draft "is in the realm of reality for several years to come" even after the end of the Vietnam war.

"We should just forget the idea that the draft could be eliminated or suspended until that war is well over," Stennis said.

The draft will be needed after that, he said, to prevent shortages for particular leadership and special skill slots.

Rivers said abolishing the draft might be an ideal and a goal to work for but "I can't see any way to do it now."

Under current regulations, 1.8 million students hold deferments, workers with agricultural exemptions total 23,000 and about 4 million men are deferred because of dependents, although not all of them because they are fathers.

Other deferments have been issued to school teachers, critical defense employes and police and firemen.

Rep. F. Edward Hebert, D-La., chairman of the House draft subcommittee said any action in Congress this election year would "invite disaster" by opening a pandora's box of wholesale, political draft overhaul.

Election Plan Fight Expected

WASHINGTON (AP) — A proposed constitutional amendment allowing the people to elect presidents directly faces a rugged final round in the Senate after a sharply fought committee triumph.

The Senate Judiciary Committee cleared the plan by an 11-6 margin Thursday, but a series of closely fought preliminary votes on rival proposals disclosed the divisiveness of the issue.

The direct vote amendment, approved by the House last September 339 to 70, needs a two-thirds vote of approval in the Senate to place it before state legislatures for possible ratification. Three-fourths' approval by the states is required.

Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., the sponsor, clung to a tactic that made the measure a big winner in the House. The senator said he hoped the rival proposals would be offered and defeated, forcing the Senate either to swing behind the direct election amendment or give up on changing the Electoral College system.

But Sen. James D. Eastland, D-Miss., Judiciary chairman, saw the narrow committee vote as a sign of sure defeat for Bayh's proposals and all the other alternative plans as well.

Bayh acknowledged the going will be tough, saying he expects a long and heated debate, possibly a filibuster.

Under the current system, voters choose Presidential electors in each state. They in turn cast their ballots for the presidential slate capturing the statewide vote.

Mary Jo Inquest Report Ruled Public Records

BOSTON (AP) — The Massachusetts Supreme Judicial Court says the transcript of testimony and the inquest report of Mary Jo Kopechne are public records and should be opened to the public promptly.

The ruling Thursday came shortly after counsel for Sen. Edward M. Kennedy asked the court to order release of the documents. Miss Kopechne drowned in Kennedy's car after it ran off a bridge last July.

The court left it to the state Superior Court to remove an order of impoundment which is keeping the papers secret. No indication was given when this would be done.

The Supreme Court said, "No person has any private property interest in these documents or any exclusive right to make copies of them." It added that it fails "to see any basis for the exercise of jurisdiction by the federal courts in these matters."

Trinidad Mutineers Release 5 Hostages

PORT OF SPAIN, Trinidad (AP) — Mutinous soldiers Thursday released six hostages —a high-ranking officer and five women—from Trinidad's main military base where they are holed up in support of Black Power demands.

Col. Joffre Serrette, a former commander of Trinidad's 720-man army, obtained the releases in negotiations with the rebels at the Tetron Bay base, site of Trinidad's only armory.

Serrette also persuaded the mutineers to transfer army officers they were holding hostage from detention cells to house arrest in their quarters on the base.

The mutiny erupted Tuesday after Prime Minister Eric Williams declared a state of emergency in an attempt to check increasingly violent demonstrations by Black Power advocates and unemployed youths and workers. The mutineers claim they have a majority of the army on their side, but their actual numbers are not clear.

The mutineers were reported asking for amnesty for more than a score of Black Power leaders arrested under the state of emergency.

Loyal troops have ringed the base, sealing it off. But the rebels' possession of the armory, and with it the government's chief stock of weapons, put the government in a tight spot.

The United States flew down one planeload of small arms Wednesday night but a spokesman for the State Department said there were no plans for further deliveries.

Child's Pajamas Rated Fire Trap

LANSING (AP) — Rep. Richard Allen dropped a piece of flannel — the kind used in most children's pajamas — into a dish, touched it with a match and watched the material quickly turn to ashes.

He repeated the process, this time using a piece of material treated with nonflammable substances. The flannel charred, but did not burst into flames.

"Many children suffer greatly and unnecessarily from burns in Michigan every year," Allen, an Ithaca Republican said. "Recent developments make it possible to treat most types of cloth to render them practically nonflammable."

Allen introduced a bill Thursday requiring clothes for young children be made of nonflammable material. The measure provides for misdemeanor penalties for violation of the regulations, with a fine of up to $500 or a one-year prison sentence.

No Tax Increase:

'Hold The Line' Is City Budget Goal

By CLINT DUNATHAN

The Escanaba City Council will recive from City Manager George Harvey a hold-the-line balanced budget for the coming fiscal year—although it is going to mean some cuts in certain municipal operations and particularly in capital improvements.

The city's fiscal year will begin July 1 and the 1970-71 general fund operating budget recommended by the manager will be $1,976,172.

This is $142,018 below the operating budget of 1969-70.

The grand total budget for the city—including municipal utilities of water, waste water, and electric—will be $4,050,467 for the coming year.

Salary Increases

The major reduction in the operating budget will bring a sizeable cut-back in capital improvements: Reduced from $320,000 to $179,598. This will be the lowest capital outlay program in many years, Harvey said.

Some budget costs have not been precisely determined as yet, the manager added. For instance, negotiations on salary are still under way and a final figure on personal services hasn't been definitely set.

But one thing is certain—there will be a salary increase for all city employes. Personal services represent about 50 cent of the operating budget.

Keeping expenditures in balance with income, as proposed in the manager's recommended budget, should be good news to Escanaba taxpayers, for it will mean no increase in the city tax rate.

Same Tax Rate

The rate will continue at $16.50 per $1,000 of the city's assessed valuation. This will bring revenue of $675,000 based on the valuation of $40,520,800—up to that figure from $38,983,750 last year.

The increase in valuation, indicating a growing community, will be helpful in bringing in additional revenues to meet the budget needs—but a growing community also means additional service costs.

The property tax is one of the major revenue sources (about one-third of the total) for the city, and the second is the municipal electric utility.

From the electric utility operation in the coming fiscal year the city expects to gain for its operating budget available profit of $345,000. In addition there will be paid to the city taxes charged against the utility for a total to the city of $404,000.

Population Factor

But revenues from the state—weight, gas, sales tax and so forth—are not so certain fo the coming fiscal year, for they are tied to a disbursement formula based on population, Harvey pointed out. Result of the 1970 census will not be known until the end of this year and will be applied retroactive to July 1, 1970.

"Our budget is based on a population of 16,000 and if the census shows we have less than that, we are going to lose, if it's more than that we will gain accordingly,' said the manager.

The anticipated state revenue to the city from all sources is $460,000—but that depends on the per capita situation.

There are other sources of revenue: $15,000 from Delta County for airport operation; $25,000 income from interest; $25,000 transferred from the parking meter fund; $70,000 from departmental revenues; $20,000 in revenues from building permits and other fees; $5,500 from the District Court; to name the major items.

Holding The Line

Budget cuts have been necessary to achieve a balanced budget, said Harvey.

Major cuts were in the capital outlay program; elimination in the manager's budget of $3,000 for an annual report calendar; and $25,000 from the city assessor for a professional reappraiser service.

Deleted also were $25,000 toward the purchase of a fire truck; elimination of the skiing program, reduction of personal service, and other economics to hold the recreation budget to $98,000 which includes the Civic Center operation.

The airport budget was up about $7,000 because of the higher standards for snow removal; and the budget includes $9,000 for resurfacing the north-south runway and $32,000 for site development west of the terminal.

Cut Six Positions

Escanaba Public Library requested $95,485 and this was reduced to $76,536, compared to a budget of $88,000 last year; street reconstruction in the amount of $40,000 was eliminated; four storm sewer projects totaling $185,000 were struck out.

Also a factor in general fund obligations is the need to subsidize the waste water utility in the amount of $85,000 since rates are not high enough to cover the waste water utility operating cost by that amount. This situation is to be corrected in the future with a new rate structure.

To bring the budget into balance, personal services got its share of reduction, the manager reported. A total of six positions are being eliminated, and this number includes four vacancies which will not be refilled. Of the four, one is in the police department and two are in the fire department.

In accordance with the city charter, the council met Thursday night to review city operations as proposed. The budget will be adopted after a public hearing to be held May 21.

Players Opening Is 'Something Special'

By DAVID LEE

Opening night of any show is always something special. The opening night of the Players de Noc production of John Van-Druten's "Bell, Book and Candle" was no exception Thursday.

The show deals with three 20th century witches. Love comes to one of the witches, Gillian Holroyd, played by Betty Donalds. The bad part is that she loves a mortal, Shepard Henderson, portrayed by Jim Bruce.

Naturally, Gillian has plenty of help in solving her problems from her Aunt Queenie, played beautifully by Coralie Puglisi, and from her brother Nicky Holroyd, who is played by Jim Moore. Another mortal enters the scene as a usually drunk author, Sidney Redltch, who is planning to write a book about witches, played by Richard Hanson.

Excels As Drunk

The first act of the production tended to drag at times, yet the audience never lost interest. The lines are quick and well delivered. The actors attempted to put all they had into their performance, especially Richard Hanson when he made his grand enterance as the drunken author.

It took this writer some time to decide if Hanson was actually drunk or just doing a fantastic job of acting. After a great deal of though, I believe it was just fine acting on his part.

The second act did seem to become a bit long, although, for production reasons, the second intermission had to be delayed until prior to the second scene of the third act. Although timewise this seemed long, the action on the stage kept the audience's attention.

In the final act, all of Gillian's problems come to an unusual end. The pace in this act is quick and the audience becomes quite envolved with the action.

Direction Excellent

Behind every good play you have a good director and "Bell, Book and Candle" is not an exception to the rule. Mrs. Glenn (Pat) Bergey has done an excellent job of bringing each individual character out of her cast. Mrs. Bergey has also done a magnificent job of producing a basically difficult show with non-professional actors.

The entire cast must be comended for a great performance. The audience can readily believe they have just seen three real witches, along with two well played mortals.

A special word of praise must go to the people backstage who did a beautiful job of designing and constructing a magnificent set.

For those who are still debating if they should see this performance, take this writer's advice and do not pass up this production. It will be an evening of enjoyment for all. The play continues at 8 p.m. today and Saturday at the Escanaba Area High School Auditorium.

Candy loving Americans consume about 3.5 billion pounds annually, or 90 million pieces, bars and sticks of candy each day.

Police Stress Safe Cycling

There are probably more kids riding bikes today than ever before and the responsibility of adults is to encourage them to ride safely, Escanaba Police Chief Richard Frederick said today.

His plea for safe riding of bikes on Escanaba streets is keyed to the observance of Bike Safety Week, in which Patrolman Ronald Kaltenbach has brought a message of safety to all of the schools in the city.

As the summer season approaches, more and more youngsters will be using bikes for fun, transportation and recreation. Motorists must share the road with them intelligently and courteously, and parents must make sure that they and their children live up to their own responsibilities, Police said.

Chief Frederick advised parents to instruct their children in safe bicycle driving techniques passed along from the Bicycle Institute of America.

Obey all traffic regulations, lights, stop signs, one-way streets.

Keep right. Ride single file. Don't weave in and out, swerve, race or stunt in traffic. Never hitch a ride on a truck or other vehicle.

For night riding, be sure to have a white light in front and a red light or state-approved reflector in the rear. Have a clear-sounding horn or bell to warn others of your approach.

Slow down at all intersections, look both ways, then proceed with caution.

Always give pedestrians the right of way.

Watch out for cars pulling into traffic or for doors opening.

Don't carry passengers or packages that interfere with your vision or control.

Always use proper hand signals for stopping and turning.

Delona Restaurant To Have New Owner

When the Delona Restaurant opens its doors for business on Tuesday, April 28, at its Bay View location, it will be under new ownership.

Frank Muse, a former resident of Grand Rapids, has purchased the restaurant from Andy and Edith Anderson. Muse is no stranger to this area though, as he has worked on the pipe line for the past five years. Mr. and Mrs. Anderson will remain in Escanaba for the summer months before moving to Florida.

Muse does not plan any changes at the Delona Restaurant at the present time. He plans to run the restaurant in the same manner in which the Andersons did and possible changes may be made in the future.

This will be Muse's first venture into the restaurant, although his parents owned one in lower Michigan. Muse's mother, Mrs. Thelma Muse, will be the head cook at the Delona. She has plenty of background as a cook, having worked in some of the fancier restaurants in the Grand Rapids area, including "Fingers."

Muse is single and plans to live right next door to the restaurant in a trailer house.

Building Permits Are Required

The City Engineer's Office today reminded residents that under the Building Ordinance, permits are required for all building construction. The provisions of the Code apply to building construction, alterations, moving, demolition, and repair.

It is anticipated that in the future, occupancy permits will be issued on new construction, and a change in occupancy.

It is the responsibility of the owner or person having work done to see that the proper permits are obtained prior to work commencing. Certain documentation must accompany the application for a permit; requirements are on file in the City Inspector's Office. A nominal fee, based on the building size must be paid to the City of Escanaba for issuance of the permit. In those cases of nonstructural work or change, no fee is required for the permit.

All construction work for which a permit is required will be subject to inspection by the Building Inspectors.

Students Clean School Grounds

Students at Escanaba Area High School Thursday completed the first of two clean-up projects planned by the Student Council as part of a campaign to improve environmental quality.

About 400 students and teachers from the high school turned out to clean up the school grounds.

The cleanup effort was done in competition between the freshman, sophomore, junior and senior classes. High school custodians and Principal Robert Micensky judged the competition, awarding Esky's traditional "Little Brown Jug" to the freshman class for doing the most complete job.

The next student-sponsored "Mother Earth" project is scheduled Sunday when volunteers from Escanaba and Holy Name High Schools will meet at the north end of Ludington Park near the U. S. Coast Guard station at 1 p. m. to begin the spring cleanup of the park.

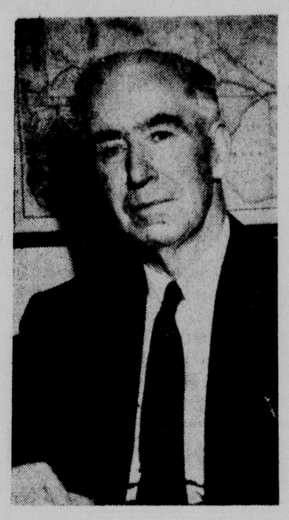

The month of "Mother Earth" activities organized by the Student Council began April 10 and will continue through May 9. Entries for the Delta County photo contest must be turned in at the PhotoArt Shop by May 9. A total of $250 in prizes donated by area merchants and unions will be awarded to winning entries.

May 9 is the official "Day In May" on which state-wide activities are being organized by Rep. David Serotkin of Mount Clemens to draw attention to environmental problems and the legislation under consideration in Lansing to deal with the problems. Escanaba Area High School is one of about 180 groups participating in the program.

DEBRIS AND LITTER on the Escanaba Area High School campus was cleaned up Thursday in a "Mother Earth" project sponsored by the Student Council. Students, from left, Sue Pepin, Janet Beck, Kim Sturdy, Barb Boyle, Cindy VanDamme and Mary Steinmetz, were among about 400 involved. Bits of glass, bottle caps along with other litter were picked up and hauled away. (Daily Press Photo)

W. P. Flynn, Sr. Taken By Death

William Flynn, Sr.

William P. Flynn, Sr., 81, longtime resident of Escanaba and 55-year employe with the Chicago & North Western Railway, died April 21 at the home of his son, William P. Flynn, Jr. in Tarzana, Calif.

He was born March 7, 1889 in Negaunee and had resided at 700 S. 10th St., Escanaba where the family home had been since 1940. His wife, Loretto M. Flynn, died in 1950.

Until his retirement in 1957 he was employed as roadmaster for the C&NW Railway and in earlier years was roadmaster in Fond du Lac, Wis. He also worked as foreman of crews who installed and repaired tracks throughout a large part of the Upper Peninsula including construction of tracks on the Escanaba ore docks.

He is survived by one daughter, Sister Joellen C. S. A. of Milwaukee; three sons, Fahey J. Flynn, prominent Chicago area newscaster; William B. Flynn, Jr., Tarazana, Calif., chairman of the Western Region Renegotiation Board and Tony Flynn, radio station manager in Hillsdale, Mich. Eleven grandchildren also survive.

A Requiem Mass will be celebrated at St. Patrick's Church in Escanaba at 11 a. m. Wednesday, April 29 and burial will be in the Bark River Cemetery. Friends may call at the Allo Funeral Home from 3 to 9:30 p. m. on Tuesday.

A fire which started in a defective LP gas evaporator caused damage to electrical wires and regulators and the firemen shut off the gas supply and let the fire burn itself out. Cause of the fire is unknown. The firemen were also called to several grass fires in the area Thursday, none of which resulted in any damage.

Four Injured In U.S. 2 Crash

Four persons were injured and two of them hospitalized as a result of a two-car accident Thursday on U.S. 2 near Nahma Junction.

Edward Hoeft, 51, of Sault Ste. Marie, driver of one of the vehicles, and his wife, Opal, were admitted to the St. Francis Hospital where they were reported in good condition today.

Also injured in the accident was Marlin Baverle, 43, of Riverview, Mich., driver of the other vehicle, and Martin Anent, 41, of Trenton, Mich., a passenger in the vehicle. Both men sought their own treatment, officers said.

State Police said the Baverle vehicle was towing a Jeep that started swaying heavily, causing Baverle to lose control of his vehicle, crossing over the center line, and colliding head-on with the Hoeft vehicle.

Officers said Baverle was ticketed for driving left of center.

Some State Road Restrictions Off

Environmental Quality Manager Named By Mead

Jerry L. Parr

Parr has been active in the company's technical service efforts for eight years, and in this new assignment will assume full responsibility and authority for control and abatement of air and water pollution at the Escanaba mill. He will report directly to O. C. Christiansen, plant manager.

Parr's new job includes monitoring the performance of all pollution control equipment to assure peak efficiency of all facilities. He has been authorized to establish and maintain highly effective stream and air monitoring systems and to implement immediate corrective actions whenever effluents or emissions from the operation exceed established standards.

To Serve Community

His responsibility includes taking the necessary corrective steps, including determining the rate of operations to alleviate immediate problems.

In addition to keeping management advised on the technical aspects of all environmental matters, he will be the mill's community representative in this area.

"He may be called by anyone in the community wishing to discuss any matters of air and stream quality relating to our operations," Christiansen said.

"The new post and its authority were established to carry out Mead's desire and willingness to be a good corporate citizen with respect to environmental quality," said Arvold.

Although Parr will devote most of his time to efforts related to assuring clean air in the community, he will also have overall supervisory responsibility for the mill's vast waste water treatment facilities, the largest system of its kind in Northern Michigan. The company will have $8 million invested in this facility by late 1971 when the Publishing Papers Center is scheduled for completion.

Diligence Required

"From the beginning, consideration of environmental resources was an integral part of the construction planning for the new mill," said Arvold. "Design engineers have expressed confidence that the new pulp mill will not create an odor in the community. However, continual diligence is required to assure satisfactory operation and to minimize the possibility of power, equipment and human failures which can and do occur in the most efficiently-built and operated facilities.

"The Mead Corp. operates under a decentralized management philosophy which allows local management broad latitudes for action in operating decisions. However, it insists on compliance with established corporate policies; one of which is a very strict requirement governing air and water pollution control."

Activity Coordinated

Ultimate responsibility for environmental quality rests with Dr. George H. Sheets, executive vice president.

A committee under the leadership of the vice president of research and engineering coordinates the activity between corporate management and operating facilities. This provides local management with staff resources, counselling and alternate courses of action when they are necessary.

Parr will prepare the communications needed by the plant manager to alert and inform corporate offices of any environmental problems at Escanaba.

"With these provisions," said Arvold "Escanaba management can assure our company and the Escanaba community that immediate action will be taken if and when an environmental problem occurs at the mill."

Trans-Alaska Oil Pipeline Gets Hickel OK

JUNEAU, Alaska (AP) — Secretary of the Interior Walter J. Hickel, told a joint session of the Alaska legislature today construction of a trans-Alaska oil pipeline will not damage the environment.

"The construction authorizations will be given only after a thorough engineering and design analysis," Hickel said in a speech prepared for delivery today. "And I can guarantee that we will not approve any design based on the old and faulty concept of 'Build now, Repair later.'"

Conservationists who heard Hickel's announcement approving the pipeline's right of way Thursday were openly skeptical that the Interior Department had resolved questions about possible damage to the land and wildlife.

But Hickel, a former governor of Alaska, told legislators "our detailed examination of the pipeline specifications will continue to include review—by our wildlife experts—to insure that migratory patterns, such as those of the caribou are not seriously disturbed."

The oil pipeline will stretch 800 miles across the arctic Alaskan tundra. The right-of-way permit is for construction of an access road along 390 miles of the line from the Yukon River to Prudhoe Bay. The entire line will connect the oil rich North Slope on Prudhoe Bay to Valdez.

Hickel repeated his plan to issue the permit once the involved parties reach agreement and all legal requirements are met. But he made no reference to a recent federal court order barring the permit until conservation groups can air their complaints against it.

Conservationists are fearful the road and pipe will serve as an unnatural barrier to wandering wildlife, cutting off their migratory patterns.

Welfare Reform

President Nixon's sweeping innovations in welfare programs were given a big boost when the House passed the reform package by a vote of 243 to 155. The measure now is in the Senate, where passage is expected, although probably with several modifications.

As the plan went to the House, it called for a family assistance program for the working poor as well as for present welfare recipients that would provide a minimum annual income of $1,600 for a family of four. Attempts will be made in the Senate to increase this assured floor, which is the provision that has caused the measure to become known as the guaranteed annual income plan, although the Nixon administration shudders at that designation and prefers to refer to the program euphemistically as the family assistance plan.

States which choose to pay more than the minimum income would receive federal assistance of 30 per cent of the extra payments, up to the officially determined poverty level. Welfare payments would not be reduced because of earnings up to $60 a month; thereafter, the payment would be cut $1 for each $2 earned.

The plan thus has built-in work incentives. Carrying this a step further, the plan requires adults in assisted families, except mothers with pre-school children, to register for training and job assignment. A new training and unemployment program would be provided under the U. S. Department of Labor working through state employment offices. Mothers with pre-school children would be encouraged to take job training through the establishment of federally financed day care centers.

Opponents of the bill protest that its enactment would launch the federal government into a revolutionary new program guaranteeing all families a minimum income, even those in which the father already is employed. Although the official estimate is that the bill would cost $4.4 billion annually, opponents claim the actual cost will turn out to be far higher than that. A proposal in the Senate provides for $3,600 minimum for a family of four, which would cost about $20 billion annually.

Up to now, the United States has never endorsed the idea that the government should pay welfare to those who have jobs. If that principle is established in law, opponents of the guaranteed annual income plan maintain, the lone destinction between those who pay taxes and those who claim them will be some arbitrary, government decreed income level. And as this level is raised, year after year, proportionately fewer and fewer people would be paying higher taxes to support more and more welfare recipients.

The principal objection of those opposed to the plan overlooks the fact that an awful lot of people who have jobs now nevertheless are poor. This, in fact, is one of the major criticisms of the present welfare system — that it is far too limited in its coverage. Only 40 per cent of the poor population benefits from public assistance programs now, according to a report by the Committee for Economic Development (CED), a nonprofit, non-partisan and non-political body that has conducted an exhaustive study of the public welfare system. The main group excluded under the present system of categorical assistance is the working poor who do not earn enough to escape from poverty.

This is not the only major indictment against the present welfare system, which is almost universally deplored for its inefficiency, inequities and abuses.

The present system also fails to offer public assistance benefits sufficient to provide a decent living for most of the recipients. The disincentives and enequities built into the existing system tend to perpetuate the very poverty that it is intended to alleviate and to encourage continued dependence on welfare. CED found wide variations in state public assistance payments and welfare services exist under the present system, which "has placed unfair and onerous financial burdens on some states and communities."

The Nixon administration's family assistance plan may not be the perfect answer to our present welfare mess, but it is a long overdue recognition that something must be done to alleviate the situation. If enacted, it will give this nation a far-reaching welfare reform program that has progressive features that are lacking in the antiquated system we hve employed for far too long.

Should U.S. Abandon The Federal Republic?

By JOHN CHAMBERLAIN

The bill calling for a Constitutional Amendment that would abolish the Electoral College and provide for a direct popular vote for President is before the Senate Judiciary Committee, where it may or may not get enough second thoughts to throw it out entirely.

But at least it is being debated in sober fashion, and the chances seem very good that the House version, which would change our traditional federal republic into a raw democracy, will be modified to some extent before the Senate as a whole votes on it in May.

Curiously enough, the impulse to defend our present system, or at least to water down the House bill, has received a number of favorable prods from bona fide card-carrying liberals who, ordinarily, would rather be caught dead than be found hobnobbing with constitutional conservatives.

Richard Goodwin, a former adviser to Presidents Kennedy and Johnson, is one liberal who defends the electoral system. Teddy White, the author of all those books about the making of various Presidents, is another. And a liberal Yale Law School professor, Alexander Bickel, who writes for the New Republic, is a third.

The most surprising thing is to find Goodwin, who has been associated with the so-called "new politics," speaking in the accents of an Edmund Burke in defense of the constitutional status quo. Says Goodwin:

"We have never before amended the Constitution in anticipation of possible abuse or on the basis of abstract theory. Only after an abuse has manifested itself, and usually after considerable public pressure, have we acted . . . Surely this is one of the reasons why the American Constitution has endured while more volatile republics rose and fell."

★ ★ ★

The virtue of the electoral system is that it gives the small state a "non-population based bonus" in the electoral college, where the number of a State's Senators is added to the number of its Representatives to determine its total vote.

This means that small or sparsely settled states, such as Delaware or Nevada, have an added increment of defense against being overborne by populous New York or California. We get sound regional representation by the system of letting the Presidential vote be called by state units (with a bonus for the weaker states) instead of the raw popular vote, which would give the practiced vote thieves in some of our more squalid urban areas the opportunity to steal a close election.

It is the possible vote-thievery aspect that particularly bothers Teddy White, who knows from his experienced reporting that "the mores and morality of vote-counting vary from state to state." There are states in the union, says White, "where votes are bought, paid for and, in all too many cases, counted, manipulated and miscounted by thieves."

Under the present dispensation third parties have little opportunity to get a solid national foothold. This saves us from the unstable multi-party fate of the French Third Republic.

Most people have the mother-wit to know that a third party vote tends to throw any given state's electoral count to the candidate who, from the third party man's point of view, would make the least desirable President. A departure from the winner-take-all electoral vote system in the separate states would encourage the creation of third, fourth, and fifth national parties. They could always hope to win by as little as 40 per cent of the vote or to force a runoff in which they could bargain for the balance-of-power position.

Because of the second thoughts instigated by the liberals themselves, the conservative constitutionalists have taken new heart.

The plan offered by Sen. Ervin, North Carolina's eminent constitutionalist, would keep the Elecoral College but bind the elecaors to abide by their states' decisions. Ervin would settle a deadlocked election by letting every member of the House of Representatives and every Senator have one vote each in choosing between the two top candidates.

The liberals have other substitute bills that are supported by Tydings, Cook, and Byrd of West Virginia.

Birch Bayh may not have clear sailing for his bill, which would abolish the federal republic in favor of a unitary democracy that might make Mayor Daley of Chicago our kingmaker.

Dollar For Kisses May Be Ill Spent

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP) — Unforgettable moments of a lifetime:

Paying a dollar for a kiss at a church social and realizing later that you could have got a greater value for your money by buying four good cigars.

Climbing the Great Pyramid near Cairo and feeling, as the dawn illuminated the desert, as if you were astride the rooftop of the world—and could, by stretching out your hand, touch the cheek of Deity.

Opening one of those window-paned envelopes from the Internal Revenue Service and finding an unexpected check from a favorite uncle.

The disappointing first taste of two things you'd always thought would be more wonderful—caviar and pomegrantates.

Watching a topless maiden in Bali climb a hill with a jar of water on her head, sinuous as a panther.

Listening to Gen. Omar Nelson Bradley, patient as a friendly schoolteacher, brief a group of war correspondents in Normandy.

Getting a "Dear John" letter from a college sweetheart who had promised to wait forever but soon decided forever lasted too long.

Being impressed by the Schizophrenic face of Field Marshal Herman Goering at the Nuremberg trials—benevolent looking as a Dutch uncle in full view but satanic in profile.

The paralyzing sight of a schoolmate in a coffin, first of his class to be confined in moveless silence.

Hearing the sound of opportunity knocking on your door but feeling just too darned humanly lazy to get up and open it.

Taking an egg, warm to the hand, from the nest of a squawking hen.

Falling off a horse you were trying to ride bareback.

Being kicked by a cow, indignant because you tried to milk her from the wrong side.

Hurting your funny bone and wondering why they call it that since you didn't exactly feel like laughing.

Trying to creep soundlessly up the stairs to bed the first time in your life you stayed out after midnight.

Landing a job on your own and bragging to your father, "Oh Dad, I'll never need help from you again,"—and then hitting him up for two bucks the very next week.

Lying in a ditch in Tunisia under bombardment and trying to claw your way through the earth to China—or anywhere but there.

Breaking an arm and dazedly seeing it dangle beyond control.

Asking God for something you knew you didn't deserve—and then feeling vaguely frightened when it was granted to you after all.

Fight Likely On Space Funds

WASHINGTON (AP) — A fight over funds for the space shuttle and station loomed today as the House called up a $3.6 billion authorization bill for the nation's space program.

"This is the start of the manned Mars landing program," Rep. Joseph E. Karth, D-Minn., said of the $190 million programmed for the shuttle. "It is too early to go into this."

The space shuttle program, envisioned for the last half of the decade, is designed to ferry men and materials to and from an earth-orbiting space station.

The spending ceiling for the program is included in the over-all bill which the House Science and Astronautics Committee increased about $300 million over President Nixon's budget. The boost was parceled out to the Apollo program and space flight operations.

But Karth, chairman of a House space science and applications subcommittee, said the National Aeronautics and Space Administration has acknowledged about $70 million for the shuttle would be available through its office of advanced research and technology if the $190 million is eliminated.

Karth said NASA has proposed $100 million for manned planetary exploration in fiscal 1977, $300 billion the next year and $1 billion in fiscal 1979. This, he said, has to involve Mars.

But Karth argued that large-scale expenditures on the space shuttle should be deferred until research can be done on the "many technical problems that must be resolved before hardware development can be undertaken effectively."

Contract Bridge

TEST YOUR PLAY

	♠ 7 6 ♥ Q J 2 ♦ A K 10 9 8 6 ♣ 9 4
♠ A K 3 ♥ A 10 3 ♦ Q 3 ♣ A 10 8 7 2	N W E S

1. You are declarer with the West hand at Three Notrump and North leads the queen of spades. If you play correctly, you can be sure of the contract regardless of how the adverse cards are divided. How would you play the hand?

	♠ Q J 7 4 3 ♥ A 5 ♦ A K 7 ♣ A Q 2
♠ A 9 5 2 ♥ K 6 ♦ Q 9 3 2 ♣ K 8 4	N W E S

2. You are declarer with the West hand at Six Spades. North leads the queen of hearts. How would you play the hand?

1. Win the spade with the king and play a low diamond from dummy, finessing the ten. If North wins with the jack, you have nine tricks consisting of five diamonds, two spades, a heart and a club.

If the ten of diamonds wins the trick, you can be equally sure of making the contract by returning a low diamond to dummy's queen and continuing with the ace and another heart. This method of play guarantees two spade tricks, two hearts, a club and at least four diamonds. The unusual diamond finesse at trick two is a safety measure to guard against every possible division of the diamonds—whether they are split 3-2, 4-1, or 5-0.

2. It is clear that the only practical danger is that one opponent has all the missing trumps. All thoughts should therefore be concentrated on guarding against this possibility.

There is only one method of play that will guard against four trumps in either opponent's hand, and that is by starting the trumps with a low one from dummy.

Accordingly, you win the opening heart lead with the king and lead the deuce of spades. If South has all the trumps, he makes only one trump trick regardless of what he does, and the same is true if North has all the trumps.

If you were to start the trumps by first leading the queen from your hand, you would go down if it turned out that South had the K-10-8-6, while if you started the trumps by first leading the ace from dummy, you would go down if it developed that North had the four missing trumps. The lead of the deuce at trick two is the only way to assure the contract.

DOLLAR MISSING

To whoever stole my silver dollar, I hope that you're real proud of yourself because in my eyes you have to be pretty low to steal from someone's collection. If you needed money that badly, I'm sure I could have given you a few dollars.

For those of you who don't know about this, here's what happened: I put my coin collection in the Gladstone Hobby Fair held last Saturday from 3 to 9 p. m. I started out with seven silver dollars and came home with six.

For me and a lot of other people, you have to be pretty low to do something like this.

Apologies Accepted On Arthritis Error

Dear Ann Landers: Do you think you can tear yourself away from the sex perverts and other assorted kooks long enough to answer a sensible question?

Several months ago you wrote a column about venereal disease. You made the statement that gonorrhea caused (among other things) arthritis.

I've read a great deal about arthritis and have never seen such a statement. In fact, the doctors with whom I have discussed this ailment say no cure for arthritis can be found because the cause is not known. I think you owe it to every person who has arthritis to retract that damaging statement or identify your authority. Get with it, Ann, or retire.—Memphis

Dear Memphis: I did indeed make the statement that gonorrhea can cause, among other things, arthritis. My authorities are Dr. John Najarian, Professor and Chairman of the Department of Surgery, University of Minnesota and Dr. Robert Stolar, Associate Professor of Medicine at Georgetown School of Medicine and Professor at Howard Medical School in Washington, D. C.

Arthritis is an inflammation of the joints. The vast majority of arthitics have either rheumatoid or osteoarthritis. In some cases the cause for the inflammation is not known. In gonorrheal arthritis, however, the cause IS known because the bacteria has been isolated and identified. Your apologies are accepted.

Dear Ann Landers: After 12 years of what I thought was a good marriage, my husband began to lose interest in me. I blamed Mike's long hours, financial pressures, everything under the sun. Finally I asked him if there was another woman. He said, "No."

Mike's boss has always treated him like a son and me like a daughter. I decided to confide in him. I don't know what possessed me but on a wild hunch I asked him if "the other woman" could be Mike's problem. He said, "Yes—it's very possible." Then he began to speak freely, assuming I knew all about it. The "other woman," it turns out, is the boss's wife. I nearly passed out.

Her reputation is not good. This isn't the first time she's been involved with a man at the plant. (She works there.) It's the first time my husband has been involved with another woman, however, and I don't know what to do. The boss does not want to fire Mike. He's sure the affair will end before long and advised me to keep quiet and keep the light in the window. What do you say?—Unhappy

Dear Unhappy: Mike's boss gave you good advice. In addition to the light in the window, dearie, keep a fire in the furnace.

Dear Ann Landers: I am pregnant with our third child. Just barely. Like, would you believe, six weeks. The doctor verified it yesterday. This morning I received three phone calls congratulating me. My big mouth husband made the announcement at his office. I am burning. He says it makes no difference when the news is told. Lay him out in your own inimitable style, Ann.—Frothing

Dear Froth: Of course it makes no difference—to HIM. Nobody asks the husband, "When already?" because it seems to them that you've been pregnant for thirteen months.

Since pregnancy is the woman's condition it should be her announcement. The husband should keep his lip zipped until she can no longer zip her skirt.

"As we look back on the entire year, we can count many, many blessings. Probably the greatest was the privilege of having many visitors from the States and the Virgin Islands with us while the construction of the hospital was going on. Plumbers, electricians, contractors, architects, Methodists, Lutherans, Catholics, Moravians all lived with us here in our own home."

The construction of the new wing to the hospital was made through great ecumenicity.

Dr. Haupert has stated that he has not done missionary work for purely humanitarian reasons but to exemplify Christianity as a way of life. The purpose is the whole person, to try to meet their needs through education and medicine. It also includes trying to meet their spiritual needs through a daily working demonstration of the Christian way of life.

On Nov. 7, 1969, Dr. Haupert had the opportunity to meet his Excellency President Anatasio Somoza and his wife who came to Bilwaskarma for the dedication of the new hospital.

Genetic Program May Be Answer To Retardation

women to abdominal X-rays can increase the risk of producing Mongoloid children—possibly by eight-fold compared with non-irradiated women—and the older the woman when irradiated, the greater the risk.

Most Common Form

Mongolism, which ordinarily occurs in one of every 600 to 1,000 children born, is the most common recognizable form of mental retardation.

3. Reported advances in detecting, in the general population, unknowing carriers of the most common form of muscular dystrophy; and some lesser progress toward detecting carriers of cystic fibrosis.

4. Growing evidence that the cause of many of mankind's most common cancers—such as malignancies of the breast, colon, stomach, and the lining of the womb—appear to be under genetic influence to a certain extent.

5. An implied challenge by Dr. John Money a psychologist of the Johns Hopkins University, to any view—scientific or popular—that a male child carrying the recently widely publicized aberrant chromosome combination, called "XYY," is inexorably headed for a criminal life.

Money said further studies need to be made before conclusions can be drawn.

Specialist Reports

On another subject, Dr. Carl M. Pearson of the University of California at Los Angeles Center for Health Sciences, and a specialist on muscular dystrophy, reported that:

Recent advances in the use of certain enzyme and other tests now make it possible to detect up to 90 per cent of those women who are unknowing carriers of the defective chromosome that can result in the "Duchene" type of muscular dystrophy, the commonest form, and the type that exclusively affects males. Females act as carriers.

Asserting that a woman who has had one son afflicted with the disease has a one-in-two chance of having another, Pearson said the new ability to detect most female carriers of the trait "provides a great opportunity for genetic counselling—and for encouraging such women not to have children because of the risk of passing on the disease (to a son)—and of passing on the carrier trait to at least one-half of their daughters."

Professor Disagrees

Dr. M. Neil Macintyre, an anatomy professor from Case University School of Medicine, Cleveland, said he disagreed with Pearson—and with anyone else holding similar views about specifically recommending against having children because of possible genetic risks.

"Genetic counselling still is not an exact science," he said. "I'm definitely opposed to urging any couple not to have children—or to have them."

He said that, in general, the couple should be informed of the known facts about possible risks, but "you should try not to let your personal bias become evident . . . Leave it up to them."

Against Abortion

He also said he opposes "destroying a child"—through therapeutic abortion—"only on the basis of the child being a carrier" of some genetic disease, as determined by tests while the unborn child is still a developing embryo.

Parents whose first-born may have been deformed or defective should be given another chance to produce a normal child, Macintyre said.

Asked by a doctor, "isn't adoption a reasonable procedure in some cases?" Macintyre replied:

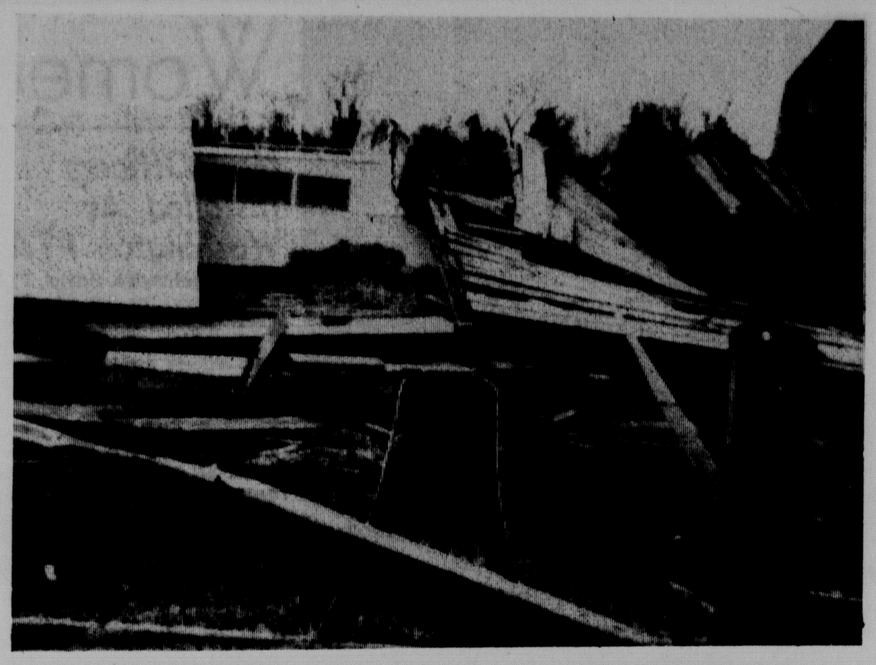

"We leave it up to them . . . it doesn't have to be no children at all—or adoption."

Reports On Results

In this connection, Macintyre reported on results of 47 cases of "very high risk" pregnancies —from the standpoint of adverse genetic history—in which pre-natal chromosomal analysis of the embryo was made by tapping amniotic fluid from the mother's womb, and culturing the embryonic cells for microscopic examination.

"Only 11 of them needed to be interrupted (by therapeutic abortion)," he said. The other 36 were free of severe defects or only carriers, but would have been aborted if the decision had been left to the parents alone.

"Thus," he said, "we saved the lives, literally, of 36 children —and to me, that's great."

SUNDAY'S WIND STORM caused considerable damage in the Manistique area and also hit the Garden Peninsula and collapsed this barn at the Louis Farley place at Kates Bay. Buried inside was a 35-foot cabin cruiser owned by Mr. and Mrs. Grady Steele of Clarkston. Damage to the boat was limited to a broken windshield and rear deck. (Mrs. Eleanor LaButte Photo)

Proposes Bill To Clamp Down On Agitators

LANSING (AP) — The vice chairman of the special senate committee probing campus disorders says he will introduce a package of bills aimed at "clamping down on campus agitators."

Sen. James Fleming, R-Jackson, said the bills bear the names of 24 cosponsors, indicating "strong support . . . for a firmer handling of campus disruptions by college administrators."

"If those in authority on state college campuses will not exercise firm but fair authority in the face of anarchists out to destroy our great schools, then the Legislature must lay down the law to them," Fleming said.

The bills would ban bringing explosives and guns onto college campuses without the prior consent of the officials of the institutions; bar a student or faculty member from enrollment of employment if he were convicted of a crime involving a campus disorder; ban the use of bullhorns or portable loud speakers without prior approval of their use by administrators.

Fleming said penalties for violations of the provisions of these bills would range from misdemeanor to felony.

The committee, chaired by Sen. Robert Huber, R-Troy, still is working on its own report of campus activity.

Higher education assistance authority, an organization hired by the committee to do research work, indicated in its report earlier this year that no further legislation was needed to combat campus disorders.

The committee noted at that time, however, that the report was not that of the senators, and did not necessarily represent their own findings.

Russ Subs Close To U.S. Shores

WASHINGTON (AP) — Soviet Polaris-type missile-firing submarines are patrolling in the Atlantic within striking range of the United States, Pentagon sources say.

At least one such submarine, built to carry 16 nuclear tipped missiles with a range over 1,200 miles, has been detected in the mid-Atlantic.

Previously, Defense officials have said several Yankee-class Soviet nuclear submarines were operational, but indicated they hadn't ventured out for more than shakedown cruises.

Secretary of Defense Melvin R. Laird believes the Russians are on a crash program to bring their Polaris-type submarine force abreast or beyond the 41-boat U.S. missile launching fleet within four years.

About 12 Soviet Yankee-class subs, capable of shooting from the ocean depths, are reported operational—about twice as many as last fall. Another 12 or 14 of these vessels are said to be under construction.

It is not known how many Yankee-class subs have begun patrols. If they follow the U.S. method of operation, the Russians would send somewhat more than half of their force to sea at any one time.

There was some indication from Pentagon sources that at least one or more Yankee-class subs might be involved in the current worldwide Soviet naval maneuvers, which U.S. Navy spokesmen call the biggest ever in peace time.

Sources implied that Russian antisubmarine warfare units in the Atlantic may be exercising against missile-firing subs, perhaps in hopes of learning how to deal with the elusive U.S. undersea fleet.

Nearly 200 Soviet surface warships, submarines and auxiliary vessels are taking part in the maneuvers, centering chiefly in the Norwegian Sea and the North Atlantic.

Plaintiff Gets $3,000 In Auto Negligence Case

A Circuit Court jury of six men and six women today returned a verdict of no cause for action against William King of King's Bar, Escanaba, and awarded Ruth E. Helwig, 1019 Stephenson Ave., damages in the amount of $3,000 from Gordon M. Graham of St. Ignace.

The verdict came after trial of an auto negligence case which began in Circuit Court before Judge Bernard H. Davidson on Monday. The jury began deliberation at 2:25 Thursday afternoon and was sent home by the judge late in the afternoon. The jury returned at 9:30 a. m. today and returned the verdict shortly before noon.

A car which Mrs. Helwig was driving was struck in the rear by a car driven by Graham on May 5, 1969. Mrs. Helwig alleged that Graham was intoxicated at the time and that King's Bar served intoxicating beverages to Graham while he was already intoxicated. She asked damages for injuries she suffered in the accident.

Postal Reform Rift Foreseen

WASHINGTON (AP) — After a generally favorable reception before a House committee, President Nixon's postal reform legislation faced a hotter political climate during hearings before the Senate Post Office Committee.

Sen. Gale W. McGee, D-Wyo., committee chairman, lashed out Wednesday at Vice President Spiro T. Agnew for what McGee called "unfortunate, incorrect and divisively partisan" remarks in connection with the bill.

Agnew last week told a Republican audience congressional Democrats had stalled final action on the Nixon administration's plan for an independent U.S. postal service.

"The Vice President, in his partisan remarks, has introduced a divisive note into what has been a nonpartisan, pragmatic attempt to deal with the very real problems facing the Post Office Department," McGee said in a statement.

In testimony Wednesday before the House Post Offfice Committee, Postmaster General Winton M. Blount, when asked about Agnew's remarks, said the postal service plan is bipartisan. He said former President Lyndon B. Johnson also backed a postal corporation plan.

Rep. Thaddeus J. Dulski, D-N.Y., chairman of the House panel, said it will begin next week marking up the plan in hopes of putting it on the floor quickly.

The legislation is a result of an agreement between government and union negotiators reached after the nation's first postal strike spread to large sections of the country last month.

James Turner GOP Candidate For Governor

LANSING (AP) — James C. Turner, Howell magazine publisher, said today he is a Republican candidate for governor.

Standing before a large floral display of chrysanthemums and lilies on the mahogany bar of the old supreme court chamber in the state capitol, Turner talked at length about his continuing probe of the Michigan legal establishment.

Information to back up charges against Kelley and Milliken, he said, was available in his office. He declined to elaborate today, saying" I might stumble over some of the names and places."

Space Program Gets Go-Ahead

WASHINGTON (AP) — The top man in the nation's space program said today the cause of the Apollo 13 failure appears relatively easy to correct, and if this proves true the nation's space program will stay on schedule.

Appearing before the Senate space committee, Dr. Thomas O. Paine, head of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, thus indicated that Apollo 14 will go as scheduled in October.

Astronauts James A. Lovell Jr. and John L. Swigert Jr. entered the packed hearing room with Paine to sustained applause from the audience and senators.

The third Apollo 13 astronaut, Fred W. Haise Jr., remained in Houston, Tex., on doctor's orders to help cure a minor infection from which he has been suffering since the flight.

Market Headed Downward Again

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market headed downard again early today in moderately active trading.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials at 10:30 a.m. had dropped 3.56 to 747.03.

Declines outran advances by about a 2 to 1 margin.

Price changes among key issues were mostly fractional with a few ranging between 1 and 2 points.

The market Thursday took its biggest loss in about nine months. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials sank 12.02 to 750.59. It had not dropped as much since July 10, 1969, when it fell 13.82. The average edged toward its lowest level of the year, which was 744.06 on Jan. 30.

Analysts attributed the severe drop to discouragement among investors. However, some analysts said the market was due for an upswing in response to recent heavy selling.

The Associated Press 60-stock average on Thursday was down 3.4 to 264.4.

Changing Time

DETROIT (AP) — Chrysler Corp. has announced that employes at many of its facilities in Michigan will start their days a half hour earlier during the period when the rest of the nation observes Daylight Savings Time.

The change, which will be in effect from April 26 to Oct. 25, will affect primarily salaried workers in general office, sales, engineering and associated operations, the company said.

Camera Rated 'Star' On TV Whale Hunt

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP) — Real life adventure has been big with the television networks since the success of CBS's National Geographic and ABC's Cousteau series. And NBC, with a spectacular hour Thursday night, may have achieved the most dramatic and gory adventure tale of all when it took viewers on a whale hunt.

The program was filmed on the picturesque Azores island of Fayal. A photographer was with men of the island who harpooned a 40-ton sperm whale then found themselves in danger, surrounded by 30 or more of the huge creatures.

Much of the program leading up to the hunt centered around a 16-year-old island boy who dreamed of becoming a whale hunter. This section suffered from a certain element of amateur staginess and a language problem which even Jose Ferrer's sleek narration could not overcome.

The real star of the program was the camera. The color photography of the small, green island and the ocean was stunning.

The Azores whale hunters still use primitive equipment—lances, harpoons and small, frail boats. As in so many of ABC's "American Sportsman" programs, the climax was the kill. Inevitable as it was, the sight of the dying animal thrashing in a sea turned red by its blood must have been as distasteful to many.

The NBC hour was one of the freshest of actuality specials which have been turned up in recent days.

This viewer, sidelined with a fractured arm for the past month and largely dependent on television for entertainment, found time passed faster in the company of some of the syndicated programs seen on local stations than in that of network standbys.

"The Mike Douglas Show," for one, is easy-to-take variety done in pleasantly low-key. Betsy Palmer, who does her homework and actually listens to her guests, has given "Girl Talk" a new character and intelligent focus. Joe Garagiola and "He Said, She Said" may deliberately get a little blue but is the sprightliest new game show around.

And David Frost has fashioned the most engaging talk show of the lot—and there are a lot. It would be nice if Frost and his fellow interviewers could continue with an interesting guest when the talk flows well instead of quitting on the split second to bring on the girl singer or the stand up comic.

Herb Shriner, Wife Accident Victims

DELRAY BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Herb Shriner, the entertainer, and his wife, Eileen, were killed in a single-car traffic accident Thursday night. He was 51 and she was 43.

Shriner was returning from a performance in West Palm Beach. The couple's three children, a daughter Indy, 19, and twin sons, Kin and Wil, 16, were at home in Fort Lauderdale.

Shriner, who was raised in Indiana, was the star of television's "Two for the Money" in the early 1950s.

Authorities said the humorist's car ran off a road and hit a tree.

Reruns Only Part Of Summer Television

By JERRY BUCK

NEW YORK (AP) — The summertime is coming to be regarded as a television season in its own right.

There still will be plenty of reruns—economics dictates that—but the networks have lined up some relief for weary viewers.

For one thing, the Smothers Brothers are coming back. Pat Paulsen, whose own show is mercifully being dropped, will join them on ABC at 10 p.m. Wednesdays.

Tommy and Dick apparently are going to be closely watched, both as to ratings and behavior. ABC does not want to become embroiled in the kind of censorship battle that caused their firing by CBS last summer. Presumably, if they pass muster on both categories they will be offered an opening next January.

Summer also is the time for silly titles for shows. Try these: "Andy Williams Presents Everything Is Beautiful With Ray Stevens." "Dean Martin Presents the Golddiggers." "Johnny Cash Presents the Everly Brothers Show." doubt that anyone is going to forget who Andy Williams is over the summer.

Other original shows are on tap. "The Kraft Music Hall" will be hosted by British star Des O'Connor and taped in England. Glen Campbell will be replaced by a variety show to be called, tentatively, "Rap."

Half of "Hee Haw" on Wednesday will be replaced by cartoons called "Where's Huddles" and the other half by reruns of "Gomer Pyle." And Jim Nabors himself will be replaced by a music and comedy show known as "Happy Days." "Animal World," seen last summer on CBS, replaces Paulsen on ABC on Thursday.

CBS is bringing back three series from past seasons. Besides "Gomer," there's "Wild Wild West" for Carol Burnett on Monday nights and "He and She" for Tim Conway on Fridays. "He and She" was one of the most civilized comedies on the tube, but died of ratings anemia.

"The Virginian" is bringing back some of the best episodes from its eight years on the air. Among the stars to be seen are Lee Marvin, Lee J. Cobb, Bette Davis, Brian Keith and Geraldine Brooks. Next year "The Virginian" converts to a "Name of the Game" format with three alternating leads.

On Tuesday CBS is dropping "Lancer" and Red Skelton early to put in a third night of movies. The starting time is 7:30 p.m., the earliest for any network movie, so obviously many of them will be of broad family appeal.

In July and August, "Laugh-In" leaves the air to be replaced by longer Monday night movies and a half-hour series to be called "Monday Theatre." It's a potpourri of comedy and drama, which sounds like a mess of rejected pilots.

House Appeal Could Help Bring About Right Price

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

If you want to sell your house this spring, you should take an inventory of its good and bad points, and try to give it house appeal.

When you are aware of its assets and liabilities, you'll know where you stand as a house seller.

That old castle may not be what it used to be, much as you love it. A prospective owner's eyes may be riveted to the flaw you haven't noticed in years.

For example, a woman may notice fire hazards—that you have lamp cords plugged into double or triple sockets and that there aren't enough outlets for kitchen appliances. The sharp-eyed husband will question whether the house is adequately wired. (A few more outlets will be worth the expense, and you may even need to install that higher voltage.)

If your house is a hot box, consider an inexpensive air conditioning machine in one or more rooms. A small unit may provide you with your biggest selling point—"this house is worth its weight in ice cubes . . . we hate to leave it in summer, it is so cool . . . we are going to miss it, it is so cool," etc.)

Women like pretty bathrooms. If wall tiles need caulking and the shower arrangement is tacky, you should attend to replacements. A new shower sheet, wastebasket and rug can improve tremendously the look of a bathroom. Pink is a color that appeals to most women, if you are stuck for ideas.

While the woman house buyer is inspecting the kitchen, bathroom and living room—her main points of interest, her husband no doubt will give his attention to the basement and utility area.

If you have a wet cellar, don't open your house for inspection until you find a solution to the problem. It is frustrating to try to sell a house that has a water seepage problem. If you have your cellar waterproofed, you can honestly say it is dry and show it without fear. Many people can detect the high humidity and mildew scent of a recently flooded basement, so you really can't bluff it.

There are good waterproofing products available for such jobs. One is applied in a shallow trench on the ground outside the basement wall. Another method is done inside by professional people. An awful lot of money can be wasted trying to get a permanent solution. The best recommendations for such products may be obtained by querying neighbors who have had the water seepage problem.

Another thing about the basement area is that it should be neat and clean. Try putting things in one area so that it looks as if it has a good deal of space. You'll be surprised at the spatial effects you can achieve with a little effort.

If it is an old cellar, make sure that cables and wires aren't hanging from the ceiling beams. Cobwebs and dust should be vacuumed. If insulation is hanging from ducts in a sloppy fashion, you should renew it. There are plastic tapes especially for duct-work seams and these make a nice neat job of it.

Are there cracks in ceilings of living room, dining room or kitchen. Somehow, these are more annoying to people than the bad condition of bedroom ceilings. They are worth the effort of repair.

Wash walls if they are finger-marked or greasy.

It is little things that make a cheery impression with house shoppers. How about papering closets? It costs little in self-labor and self-stick papers. Use bright colors. Even timid decorators appreciate color in a closet.

How about those litle extras you are "going to leave in the house" . . . an inexpensive planter with a few plants . . . the curtains (which don't fit in your new house anyway), the dimmer light control . . . Play it up to the lady house shopper.

You should provide an air of tranquillity on the day your house is being shown. Farm out the children and Fido, if you can. A lot of house sales are lost because crying children and barking dogs left the house shoppers with an unpleasant feeling of noisiness. A noisy hot water system is another detriment when you are showing the house. Turn the heating system down for the occasion. Everybody gets used to such things, but if they hear it beforehand, they may decide it "will get on our nerves."

The most important house pickup begins outdoors. If paint is peling on the house, scrape the little peels. It is easier to sell a freshly painted house, but it is a bit much to worry about when you are moving in a rush—and the lookers will understand.

A house entrance makes the first impression. Does the driveway look sloshy and unfinished? What can you do to improve it. If there is a terrace at the rear of the house, put the outdoor furniture in place. You can also make a house look more attractive by shining the windows, putting flowers in rooms and having clean rugs on the floor.

The overall impression should be a clean, pleasant, tranquil one, and your house will sell itself, if the price is right.

Q.—My husband won's listen to me. He reads your questions and answers all the time, so maybe he will listen to you. We have a ranch house with wood siding painted white. There is an attached garage with an overhead entrance door at the front of the house. The door is in need of painting. My husband is an amateur artist and has done a good job of painting a landscape scene on one wall of a room in the house. Now he wants to paint some kind of a design on the garage door. I don't want him to do it, as I think it will cheapen the looks of the house. Can you convince him that I'm right?

A.—We're not sure we can convince him of anything—but we'll try. It has always been our opinion that a garage door at the front of a house should blend in with the rest of the house and not be a focal point. It is the house itself that should catch the eye. When a garage door is painted a bright color, as is sometimes done with a house of good design, people notice the door first instead of the over-all structure. This would be oven more likely to occur if there were a painting on the door. Sorry, sir, but we have to agree with your wife.

Q. — Over the years I have read of many different ways to keep skin from forming on leftover paint after it has been on the shelf a few weeks or months. Nothing seems to work for me. I understand the skin forms because of the paint's contact with the air. No matter how tightly I seal the can, the paint winds up with a skin covering. Why is this?

A. — Keeping the can airtight helps, but remember that there is plenty of air in the partly filled can before you close it. Do the best you can and don't worry about it Why not simply remove the skin before you remix the paint? If you can't get all of it out, cover another container with a piece of cheesecloth and pour the paint into it. The cloth will trap any pieces of paint skin you failed to remove.

Q.—I am thinking about having our roof reshingled. It now has wood shingles, but I want to get asphalt shingles. Can they be put on right over the wood or will the old roof have to be removed?

A.—Unless there is something structurally defective—such as rotted supports—the asphalt shingles can be installed over the wood. But the job must be done properly. This involves removing loose or protruding nails and replacing them; renailing loose shingles; and splitting badly warped shingles and nailing down the segments. Where old shingles are badly curled or turned at the butts, a feathering strip nailed along the butt edges will provide a smooth surface for new shingles and a solid nailing base. The installation of 1" by 4" or 1" by 6" wood strips at the eaves and rakes, after removal of sufficient old wood shingles to make room for the strips, will result in better alignment of the new shingles, better nailing and added wind resistance. Use of suitable drip edges and eave flashing strips are other important steps in proper reroofing.

Are You Paying More Dough For Same Bread?

WASHINGTON (AP) — The house wife who pays the few cents extra for certain specialty breads may be getting nothing substantially different from plain bread.

A survey by the Food and Drug Administration, guardian of the nation's staff of life, concludes that in some butter, egg, potato and buttermilk breads the amounts of special ingredients are unreasonably low.

In one instance, a butter bread was found to contain no butter at all. Other butter breads were found to contain as much as 2½ pats.

The average number of pats found to be present was 1½, or three-eights of an ounce. The FDA survey showed 80 per cent of the consumers expected to get 2 pats or more in their butter bread.

The survey found as little as one-fifth of an egg or as much as one and one-third eggs in egg bread. The average of half an egg compared to the one egg or more expected by 75 per cent of the consumers.

The survey found similar wide variations in the other specialties: From one-third of an ounce toujus5 shy of a full ounce of potato flour, from one-half ounce to nine ounces of buttermilk.

Bakers say the special ingredients are added to give the breads a distinctive flavor. How much is needed, they say, is largely a matter of taste.

"A comparison of the surveys of consumers and manufacturers reveals that some bakers' formulas are lower than may be considered reasonable as to the quantity actually present of the ingredient that is named on the label," said the FDA in its report.

The report has revived action on possible requirements for how much or how little of the ingredients covered in the survey should be included in bread.

The government proposed standards for all specialty breads in 1941, but when the standards were finally set in 1952 they covered only white bread, whole wheat bread, enriched bread, milk bread and raisin bread

The industry and FDA have been conferring in the past year on possible additional standards. "It looks like we'll have little trouble getting a meeting of the minds," said an industry spokesman.

Proposed standards for butter, egg, potato and buttermilk bread will be presented to the annual convention of the Association of the Retail Bakers of America on May 15.

Versatile and easy to handle, the portable electric drill was the first of the power tools to attain widespread popularity with the do-it-yourselfer. It has never lost its important position in the home as a useful machine, getting particular attention in recent years from women.

While the primary function of a drill is to make holes in wood, metal and other materials, it can perform a large variety of other tasks, all made possible with dozens of accessories and attachments. Within the past three or four years, most manufacturers have come out with deluxe models that have special features, not the least of which are shockproof housings.

Someone purchasing a portable electric drill for the first time would do well to select one of the kits which contains, in addition to the drill, several bits, a wire wheel, a grinding wheel, sanding and polishing equipment and, in some cases, a horizontal drill stand. The stand enables the drill to be used in a set position, making it a kind of miniature drill press.

When not abused, a portable electric drill is one of the most durable tools on the market. The difference between proper use and abuse is often very little and entails no more than a bit of thought now and then. Once the fundamentals are followed a few times, the correct handling becomes a matter of habit.

To prevent the bit from wandering and marring the work done when drilling into wood, always use a brad awl or nail to mark a point which is to be the center of the hole. The bit should be placed in this mark before starting the motor. Pressure should be moderately firm, never heavy, since too much pressure might stall the drill. This is especially important when drilling into hardwood since the resistance of the material encourages a tendency to make the drill work faster than it should.

When drilling into metal, be sure the work is firmly anchored. Bending or, distortion of thin metal can be prevented by backing it with a wooden block. The starting hole is made with a center punch. Apply only enough pressure to the drill to keep the bit cutting smoothly. When using a heavy metal turpentne and kerosene are among the lubricants that should be used on the bit.

Masonry drilling must be done with a carbide-tipped bit. In this case, heavy pressure on the drill is necessary. Since this can be tiring, you will want to stop now and then. To prevent damage to the bit, the trick is to remove the bit from the hole while the motor is still on, then release the trigger.

The quarter-inch drill is the most popular, but there are many other larger sizes for heavy duty work. The size refers to the maximum diameter of the bit shank that can be held in the drill chuck, not to the size of the hole that can be drilled. But if most of your work involves the drilling of holes larger than one-quarter of an inch, you would be wiser to use a larger-sized drill.

Realtor Title Is Awarded To Mrs. Berglund

Lucy M. Berglund, 716 3rd Ave. S., has been awarded the designation of "Realtor," by the National Association of Real Estate Boards through the Michigan Real Estate Association.

Mrs. Berglund was presented with the designation by Howard H. Billings, realtor, president of the Upper Peninsula Board of Realtors at a meeting in Crystal Falls recently.

The term Realtor, coined in 1915, is considered synonymous with high integrity and excellence in the real estate industry, and is now a registered trademark with the U. S. Patent Office. Since its registration, under the Lanhorn Act in 1949, the courts have constantly upheld its exclusive use by those who hold membership in their local real estate boards, State Association and the National Association of Real Estate Boards.

Mrs. Berglund has been active in the real estate business in Escanaba for over four years. She is associated with William DeHaan, realtor, owner of Art Goulais Real Estate agency; is the only woman in the Upper Peninsula presently active in the real estate business, to have the realtor designation, and is the second woman in the U. P. to win the realtor title.

Q.—Our doorbell stopped ringing recently. I am fairly handy around the house, but I never fool around with the electricity. However, I remember reading that there is an easy way to tell if the push-button is out of order and requires a replacement. Can you tell me how?

A.—The voltage necessary to operate a doorbell is so little as to be virtually harmless. Even under the worst conditions, the most you would get would be a tiny, almost imperceptable vibration. Under normal conditions, you will feel nothing.

To test whether a pushbutton is at fault, disconnect it from the outside wall by taking out the two screws. Two wires will be attached to two screws inside the button mechanism. If one of them is loose, there's your trouble Reconnect it and the bell will work. But if both wires are securely attached, place the metal part of a screwdriver across the two screw terminals. If the bell rings, then the push-button is the culprit. Clean the contact points with emery cloth or sandpaper. If the bell doesn't ring when the wires are attached and you push the button, buy a new pushbutton, attach it and the trouble will be over.

When, during your original inspection, the bell fails to ring when you make the screwdriver test, the problem is with the bell itself, the dry-cell batteries (some doorbells still use them), the wiring or, very infrequently, the transformer. When a bell rings constantly and doesn't stop, two uninsulated wires are touching, causing a short circuit, in which case you have to trace the wires and find the break.

Q.—I will be 65 years old in a couple of months. When I retire at that time, I expect to sell my house and move to another city, where my wife and I will pay rent to my son, who owns a two-family house. I have been told that I can get about $18,000 for my present house. I paid only $12,000 for it. Is it true, as I have been told, that I won't have to pay any income taxes on the profit because I will be over 65 years old at the time of the sale?

A.—Your information is correct. The tax law says that if you are more than 65 years old at the time you sell your house, you do not have to pay a tax on the profit—provided that you have lived in the house for five of the past eight years and that the sale price is not over $20,000. If it should be over $20,000, then only part of the profit is taxed.

Four Bedroom Small House

By ANDY LANG

A house with two and one-half bathrooms is usually not considered "small." This one is, since architect Herman H. York has managed to keep the habitable area to 1406 square feet by holding the rooms to economical sizes.

Included are many features normally found in larger houses, such as a covered front entrance, separate dining room, family room, private bath for the owner, dinette space in the kitchen, pantry and a lavatory between the kitchen and the garage.

In addition, there is the expansion possibility of the area above the bedrooms, where 300 square feet of extra space can be arranged as a family studio, hobby center or fourth bedroom.

Taking a closer look at the plan layout, we find, upon entering the house, a sweep of 30' across the length of the living and dining rooms. From the entrance, one can go directly into either the living room or to the less formal family room. The family room leads to the rear terrace through sliding glass doors. As soon as one enters the family room, there is a view of a masonry fireplace, located conveniently to the rear yard and its supply of firewood.

To extend the length of the family room, a counter and wall cabinet are used in lieu of a solid wall between that room and the kitchen. Since there usually is an informal decor in the family room, an open plan arrangement involving it and the kitchen makes for ease of movement and an atmosphere of spaciousness.

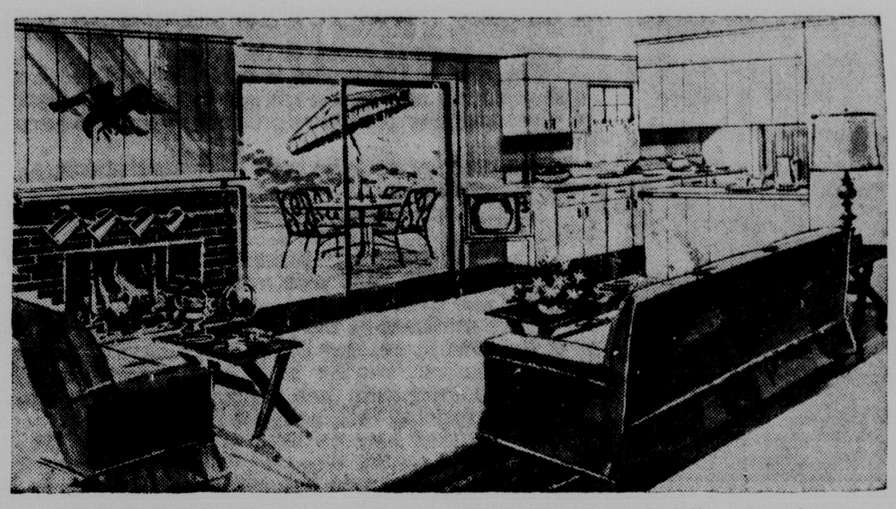

The kitchen is at the hub of circulation, making for convenient service to all adjacent spaces, including the family room, laundry and rear terrace outdoor dining. The kitchen window has a pass-through and exterior shelf making serving to the outside an easier task.

In the bedroom area at the left side of the house are three rooms and two baths. The hall bath, arranged in a split layout, has its own linen closet. The bathroom in the master bedroom has a stall shower.

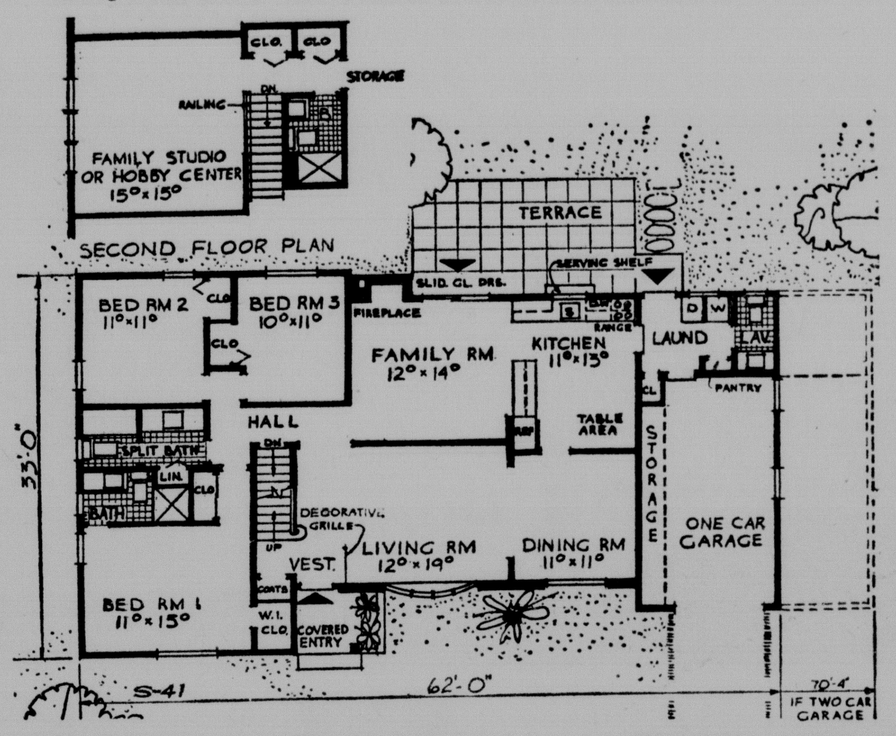

Outside Design S-41 is clothed in wood shingled walls and asphalt roofing. However, the main front wall, with two interior corners, utilizes fieldstone veneer. Since large portions of the wall are eliminated by the windows and a door, the area of the wall is minimal. The use of stone at the entrance is a device popular with architects, as it tends to create a first impression of luxury. In this case, in order to keep the house somewhat informal, a cross buck door is used, complimenting the arched covered entry.

S-41 STATISTICS

Design S-41 has a living room, dining room, family room, kitchen, three bedrooms and two baths, totaling 1406 square feet. The laundry area to the right of the kitchen includes a pantry and a lavatory. In front of that is a one-car garage with a storage area along one wall. The over-all dimensions of the house, including the garage, are 62' by 33'. If a two-car garage were needed, 10' 4" would be added to the frontage. There is an expansion area over the bedrooms which could be used as a studio or hobby center. If the room were to be utilized as a fourth bedroom, an upstairs bathroom could be included. A cellar, extending below the entire house, is accessible from the main hall on the first floor.

FAMILY ROOM, adjacent to kitchen, has brick fireplace and sliding glass doors leading to rear terrace. Room is reached directly from the entrance hall.

FLOOR PLANS: Utilization of all available space (no large foyer, for instance) has enabled architect to place seven rooms, two baths and a lavatory on the first floor in an area of less than 1500 square feet. Upstairs room is optional.

ON THE HOUSE

AP Newsfeatures Writer

If you own a house, the chances are you own an outside ladder. It's a simple piece of equipment, made of wood or metal and without any menacing appearance. But it is a potential source of danger, as the safety statistics make clear year after year.

Careless handling is the most frequent cause of ladder accidents, but a structural breakdown sometimes is the offender. The second reason for trouble can be dispensed with very quickly. You need not worry about your ladder failing to hold you if you purchase one that is in good condition (not as silly as it sounds) and if you keep it that way.

When buying a ladder, check all parts carefully to be sure that it hasn't been damaged in some way during transportation or because it has been banged around a bit by store employes. Especially note whether the rungs and side rails are solidly connected and that all hardware connections are secure. After you own the ladder, treat it well. Don't leave it outside in all kinds of weather. And don't paint it, since the paint may hide defects that might occur at a later time.

In setting up a ladder against the house, its feet should not be too far from the foundation and not too close. An easy way to get the proper distance is to divide the length of the ladder by four. That's how far the bottom of the ladder should be from the house. It would be 4 feet, for instance, for a 16-foot ladder.

A safe ladder should be equipped with safety treads or some device to prevent it from sliding. After the ladder is set in place, stand on the bottom rung and jump up and down a few times to be sure it is firmly placed. Since a ladder slips sideways when its user foolishly leans over too far to reach a certain spot on the house, it's a good idea to buy one of the extension safety devices that are attached to the upper part of the ladder so that slippage is not too likely. But don't allow the device to make you so confident that you take silly chances while high in the air.

Never go higher than the third rung from the top of the ladder. If there are children playing in the vicinity, get them out of there or postpone your project until they are gone. Unless you are experienced in handling the movement of large, heavy ladders, get someone to give you a hand when performing that chore. When you are working in front of a door, it isn't enough to tell the other members of the family not to open the door; either keep the door open all the way or lock it.

And if it's a windy day, forget about the whole thing.

A Birds-Eye View Of Minneapolis Shoal

The Coast Guard members of the Escanaba station launched their 30-foot utility boat and made their first trip of the season in it, to the Minneapolis Shoal lighthouse, this week.

The lighthouse officially opened for the season on March 27, and until this week crews were transported to and from the lighthouse by the Coast Guard Cutter Mesquite.

The Minneapolis Shoal lighthouse was built in 1938 and stands 82 feet high on a concrete platform that measures 62 feet square. The outside is quite weather beaten but well maintained. Inside there is more room than it would appear and the condition is very well kept.

Engineman 1st Class Kenneth Crowe said, "the first two months and the last two months at the lighthouse, are the longest two months you'll ever spend in your life."

The lighthouse is located in Green Bay, about 12 miles south of the Escanaba Yacht Harbor, in a depth of about 20 feet of water. It is operated by the U. S. Coast Guard and serves as an aid to navagation .

Early every Wednesday morning, weather allowing, the Coast Guard departs from the Escanaba Yacht Harbor to the lighthouse, loaded with supplies, mail, and relief crewmen.

The boat assigned to the Escanaba station, Coast Guard 30376, is a diesel powered craft that will reach a speed of about 18 knots, or 20 m.p.h.

The roar of the engine is deafening and the boat is showing it's age, as one can see by the many layers of white and gray paint that peek out around the seams and bolts.

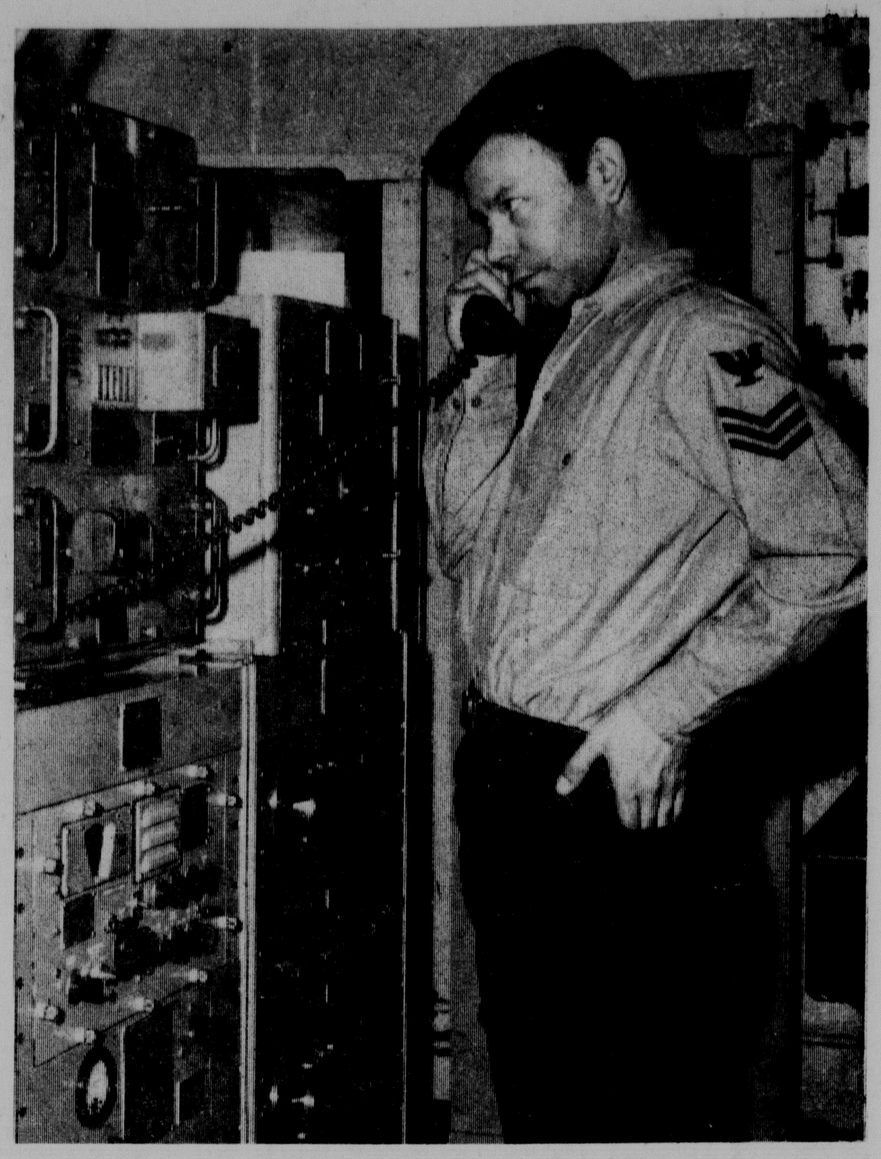

The boat proves to be quite adequate however, and very dependable.

During normal weather, a one-way trip to the lighthouse takes about 45 minutes.

The Coast Guard tries to maintain a three-man crew at the lighthouse, each man averaging two weeks on duty and one week off.

While stationed at the lighthouse the men help to pass the time by reading books, watching TV, putting puzzles together, playing table tennis, doing hoggy-craft or whatever suits their fancy, in addition to cooking and performing their assigned duties.

When asked how he liked serving in the Coast Guard, Seaman Jeffery Wee said, "I didn't know exactly what I was getting into but now that I've been in a while, I really like it."

EUGENE NADEAU, Engineman 1st, top right, transmits a message from the lighthouse switchboard. Coast Guardsmen use the radio equipment to communicate with vessels and shore installations.

Pack Schedule Has New Look

GREEN BAY — The Green Bay Packers, who thought they had an unbalanced schedule last year when they played their last seven games in wintry northern weather, will learn the true meaning of imbalance in 1970.

The National Football League announced its schedule Monday night, one which for the first time involves inter-league play between the NFL and the former American Football League. The two leagues, now merged, will henceforth be known as the National Football Conference (NFC) and American Football Conference (AFC).

Green Bay will play seven of its first nine games at home—either in Green Bay or Milwaukee — and all its last five on the road. Detroit, by contrast, will shoot for the same Central Division championship by playing four of its last five games at home.

Same Alignment

The Packers are again with the Lions, Minnesota Vikings and Chicago Bears in the Central Division of the NFC.

Green Bay's three games against AFC teams will hardly seem like new times. Two of the three AFC opponents, Pittsburgh and Baltimore, were members of the NFL last season. The third game, against the San Diego Chargers, will be played in California, where the Packers have been frequent visitors.

The Packers will have some unsettled practice weeks, with three weekday games. The game in San Diego Oct. 12, and one against Baltimore in Milwaukee Nov. 9, will be Monday night games, televised nationally as part of the new contract with the American Broadcasting Co.

Thanksgiving Game

In addition, the Packers will play the Dallas Cowboys at Dallas on Thanksgiving Day, Nov. 26, starting at 2:30 p.m. The game will mark Green Bay's first Turkey Day business since Vince Lombardi ended the team's longtime participation in the Lions' Thanksgiving show in 1964.

In addition to Baltimore, Milwaukee opponents will be the defending champion Minnesota Vikings, in a 3 p.m. game Oct. 4, and the Philadelphia Eagles, Oct. 25.

Green Bay opponents will include the Lions, Sept. 20, the Atlanta Falcons, Sept. 27, the Los Angeles Rams, Oct. 18 and the Chicago Bears, Nov. 15.

Gilt Edge-Bosch Wins Keg Title

The Gilt Edge-Bosch team of the Bowl-A-Rama American League captured the league championship Wednesday night, defeating King's Bar in a three-game rolloff by 16 pins, 2,666 to 2,650.

Dave Andrews paced the winners with a 616 series. Al Adams rolled 610 for King's.

Gilt Edge-Bosch had won first half honors in the league, while King's finished on top in the second half. Besides Andrews, bowling for the winning team were Bill Wanic, Tom Kroll, Norm Dahlke and Charley Meyer. Bowling for King's were Ron Parlatto, Dwaine Menard, George Peterson, Steve King and Adams.

NBA All-Star Team Selected

NEW YORK (AP) — Jerry West, Willis Reed, Walt Frazier and Billy Cunningham, a quartet of familiar names, and newcomer Connie Hawkins were named today to the National Basketball Association's 1969-70 All-Star team.

West, Los Angeles' high-scoring guard, picked for the seventh time, was the only unanimous selection announced by Commissioner Walter Kennedy. The squad was selected by a panel of sports writers and sportscasters in the league's 14 member cities.

Reed, center on New York's Eastern Division champions, and Frazier, the Knicks' aggressive guard, made it for the first time. Cunningham, Philadelphia's standout forward, made it for the second time.

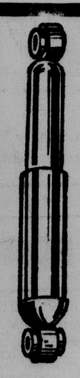

Hawkins has the distinction of making all-star teams in both the NBA and the American Basketball Association. The catquick forward was on all-star teams in the ABA while with the Pittsburgh and Minnesota franchises and was the league's most valuable player last year.

Oscar Robertson, Cincinnati's longtime star recently traded to Milwaukee, missed the first team for the first time since he turned pro in 1960.

More people get more news from newspapers than all other sources combined.

Wabung Meeting

There will be a Wabung Baseball meeting on Wednesday, April 29, at 7:30 p.m. at the Escanaba Daily Press. All team representatives are asked to be present. Any new team interested in joining the league is also invited.

Unbeaten Bruins Ruffle Hawks' Feathers Again

By The Associated Press

Wayne, Wayne go away, please come back another day? If the Chicago Black Hawks want to parody the familiar refrain today, you couldn't really blame them.

Wayne Carleton and Wayne Cashman contributed key goals Thursday night to lead Boston over Chicago 5-2 for a commanding 3-0 lead in their National Hockey League playoff series.

The best-of-7 East Division finals continue Sunday in Boston.

In West Division play, Pittsburgh downed St. Louis 3-2 to cut the Blues' margin to 2-1 in their best-of-7 set. They resume Sunday in Pittsburgh.

After Chicago took a 1-0 lead in the first period on Cliff Koroll's goal, Carleton took a pass from Eddie Westfall and tied the score on a 20-footer at 8:50.

Chicago Takes Early Lead

The Teams traded goals, then Cashman shot the Bruins into a never-headed 3-2 lead a little more than six minutes into the second period.

Another key contribution to Boston's big victory was an outstanding save by Bruins' goalie Gerry Cheevers early in the third stanza.

The Bruins were leading 4-2 in the early minutes of the final session when Keith Magnuson took a pass from Stan Mikita, came in all alone and unleashed a point-blank shot at Cheevers.

But the Boston goalie got his glove in front of the shot and the save seemed to take the sting out of the Black Hawks.

"That was a big stop . . . a big stop," exulted Boston Coach Harry Sinden. "We weren't playing all that well. If Magnuson had got that goal, I don't know if we could have snapped out of it and held them.

"If you want to talk about a turning point, I guess that was one all right."

Chicago Coach Billy Reh agreed: "Unbelievable that it wasn't in the net! One of the greatest saves I've seen. That's the kind of play when all you can do is throw your glove up."

Pittsburgh Wins

Rookie Michel Briere, a 150-pound center, scored a goal and added an assist as Pittsburgh scored three goals in the first two periods, then held off last-period thunder by St. Louis.

"Altogether I think it was the best game we've played," said Briere. "If we get them Sunday, we'll win it in four games."

He also said he was happier with his performance in this game than any all season.

"I caught them on defense several times," he said. "I was just as happy about that as the offensive play."

Talking about Briere, Coach Scotty Bowman of St. Louis said: "We knew he was a good hockey player. He's pretty fast. Looks much better than any other offensive player they have because they are mostly a defensive team."

The Penguins dominated the Blues early as Briere scored the third goal in the second period, and gave Pittsburgh a 3-0 lead. Then Larry Keenan scored two lightning goals in the third stanza, but it was too little, too late.

The Crusaders finished with a 486 total, three less than Menominee, which had a 489. Escanaba was third at 500.

Kim Agneberg was medalist for the meet with a 38, while Brian Douglas, just a freshman, topped the Crusaders with a 42. Ken Peterson and Mike Beck paced the Eskymos with 45's.

Team scores:

Holy Name — Brian Douglas 42, Mike Douglas 43, Pat Manning 44, Don LeMire 45, Steve Kleiman 45, Bob Kleiman 45, Dave Fassbender 48, Ron DeGrand 54, Jim Kroll 58 and Kelly O'Connell 62.

Menominee — Kim Agneberg 38, Pete Smith 41, Fred Hofer 41, Bill Sorneson 47, Dave Gustman 47, Lonnie Larson 51, Rick Kaufman 55, Rob Mallgren 56, Gary Cadieu 56, Bill Dufrane 57.

Escanaba — Mike Beck 45, Ken Peterson 45, Randy Eis 47, Steve Ohman 48, Gene Olsen 49, Terry Mulvaney 49, Tom Shaw 52, John Erickson 54, Steve Cerasoli 54 and Bruce Turner 57.

Highland Slates Twilight League Opening Tuesday

Hazen Hengesh, president of the Highland Golf Club, announced today that the men's Twilight League will officially open Tuesday, April 28.

Work has been carried on over the entire course and the greens have been cut for the first time this year and are in excellent condition. The heavy rains this past week have created a water condition on holes 8 and 9, but the remaining 16 holes are in very good condition, Hengesh said.

There will be no formal matchmaking and golfers are asked to make up their own foursomes. Plans will be made for the league formation and anyone interested in playing in the league may sign up Tuesday.

Dinner will be served for the golfers on Tuesday.

Player Leads In Golf Tournament

RANCHO LA COSTA, Calif. (AP)—"When you're playing for money," said Gary Player, "golf is a game of sorrows."

The tough little South African waxed philosophical Thursday after cutting out a four-under-par 68 and taking the first-round lead in the $150,000 Tournament of Champions.

"When you're playing for fun, it's fun," Player said." "But when you're playing for money, well, that's something else. You always think you can do better.

"At the end of a tournament, there's only one man who is happy. Everyone else is unhappy."

Player, the defending titleholder, held a stroke lead over British Open champion Tony Crampton going into today's second round as the foreign contingent dominated opening-day play in this prestige-laden event.

Three-time champion Arnold Palmer headed a group of four tied at 70, two-under-par on the plush, 7,114-yard La Costa Country Club course. The others are Dale Douglass, Lee Trevino and Frank Beard.

Jack Nicklaus and Masters champion Billy Casper were in a group at 71.

Player, one of four men to sweep all the world's major golf titles, had it six-under-par until he bogeyed two of the last three holes.

He had three deuces and reeled off one string of four consecutive birdies.

"I could have had a 63 and should have had a 66 at the very worst," he said. "I'm playing the best golf of my career.

"I was hitting it right at the flag on every shot, just knocking it stiff."

He missed a 12-foot birdie putt on the first hole, then canned a twisting 25-footer on the third.

Player missed birdie putts of eight and three feet on the fifth and sixth, then put a five iron three feet from the flag on seven.

He started his birdie string with an eight-footer on the ninth, canned a 12-footer on the next and rifled an iron within six feet of the hole on the next.

And he got it up and down from a trap for a birdie four on the next

Yanks Rip Senators Behind Cater's Bat

By The Associated Press

See-saws are for kids but Danny Cater rode a dandy one in Washington this week.

Cater is one of the new-look hitters who are supposed to make New York Yankee fans remember the good old days. And he did a pretty good job of just that Thursday night, ripping four hits and driving in three runs in New York's 11-6 romp over Washington.

It was the third time in the four-game series against the Senators that Cater had collected three or more hits. But oh, that fourth game. Danny was 0-for-8 in the 18-inning marathon Wednesday night.

Cater went into the Washington series batting .268 on 11 hits for 41 tries—adequate but hardly exciting. Then three hits Monday and three more Tuesday boosted his average to .340—much nicer company.

Carter Up And Down

Just as Cater was enjoying the see-saw ride up, he went down but fast. The 0-for-8 marathon horsecollar cost him 47 points and he was back down in the mundane world of .293 hitters. Then came Thursday's 4-for-6 and back up to .328.

Cater and Bobby Murcer handled a hefty share of the Yankee offense with seven of New York's 15 hits. The Yankees also collected 10 walks.

New York hopped into a 5-0 lead but it was wiped out by the Senators with three of Washington's runs coming on a booming Frank Howard homer.

Then the Yankees pecked away, rebuilding their lead and rookie John Cumberland came out of the bullpen to earn his first major league victory with 6 1-3 innings of airtight relief.

Pirates' Fourth Straight

In the only other games played Thursday, Pittsburgh downed Atlanta 8-6 and Chicago topped Minnesota 7-5. The scheduled Cincinnati at St. Louis game was rained out.

Bill Mazeroski's three-run double keyed a five-run Pittsburgh explosion in the seventh inning and then the Pirates survived an Orlando Cepeda grand slam to beat the Braves.

Manny Sanguillen drove in three runs for the Pirates with a homer and a single and Hank Aaron hit his 560th career homer for the Braves.

It was Pittsburgh's fourth straight victory and the sixth straight loss for the Braves.

Bobby Knoop cracked a home run and Minnesota reliever Ron Perranoski's throwing error gave Chicago two runs, helping the White Sox trim the Twins.

Knoop's eighth inning homer tied the score at 4-4 for Chicago and then the White Sox scored three more runs—two of them when Perranoski threw Luis Aparicio's bunt into left field. Aparicio raced all the way to third on the play and scored a moment later on a sacrifice fly.

Little League Sign-Up Slated

Despite the chilly weather approximately 40 Little League candidates were processed Wednesday night as the 1970 Escanaba Jaycee Little League season got underway. Try-outs will resume Saturday morning at the Little League diamond at ten o'clock with John "Angie" Hirn in charge. Twelve year old candidates will report at ten o'clock and nine year olds at 10:30.

Try-outs will continue in the afternoon at two o'clock at the same field for ten and eleven year olds. Candidates are asked bring their completed registration blanks with their birth certificates to the workouts. Registration blanks will be available at the field, but all prospects should bring their gloves. Escanaba Little League try-outs are open to all boys who will be nine but not 13 before August 1, 1970 and live in the city of Escanaba. However, boys of Little League age must take part in the spring tryouts to be eligible for Minor League play. This is a National rule designed to give the younger and less talented players an opportunity to play in the program.

Spartan Athlete To Have Surgery

EAST LANSING (AP) — A knee injury has thrown Michigan State freshman football player Jesse Williams of Bellefontaine, Ohio, out of action for the year.

Corrective surgery was required on Williams right knee after it was injured during a team scrimmage earlier this week.

Williams, a halfback, suffered torn ligaments in the knee, reported team physician James Feurig.

Williams had been a star in early Spartan drills and was looked upon to give the team's running offense a boost this fall.

Seven Veterans Bolster Rockets

The Rapid River Rockets will open their 1970 track season on April 28 in a triangular meet at Manistique. The Rockets will face the host Emeralds and the Big Bay de Noc Black Bears in the meet.

Rapid River, which has won the Central League Conference for the last nine years straight, will have seven returning lettermen back this season.

Bernie Olson, who is in his 13th year as track coach of the Rockets, said that he will have a fairly well-balanced team again this season, but not the depth that they have had in other previous years.

Returning veterans will be Dan Safford, who broke the conference record last season in the long jump and is running in both the 100 and 220 dashes; Dave Holmgren, pole vaulter and half miler; Dale Pasi in the mile; Charles Lassen in the 440 and John Deneau in the two mile run.

Other letter winners include Jeff Boyer, who broke the conference record in the pole vault last season with a jump of 11 feet 6 inches and he will also be running in the hurdles. Dale Morin, who injured his knee last fall is a questionable starter for the defending Class D Regional Champs.

In addition to the veterans, other candidates include: Mark Sigfrids, Mike Johnson, Jeff McClinchy, Morley Rushford, Pat Short, Tom Pineau, Robert Holmgren, Robert Kaukola, Robin Wicklund, Mike Hoban, Willie Pyke, Glen Lundin, Bruce Deneau, Peter Austad, George Anderson, Gary Moore and Dale Johnson.

The Rapid River track schedule is as follows:

April 28—at Manistique
May 12—Central League at Escanaba.
May 16—Regional Meet at Escanaba
May 18—at Gwinn
May 23—U. P. Finals at Marquette

"The film has a special appeal for young people who are searching for identity and relevance in a world that confuses them," said Rev. Robert Haring, pastor of the Bethel Baptist Church.

Gladstone To Hold Bicycle Safety Day

Mayor Raymond Norton has proclaimed Saturday as Bicycle Safety Day in Gladstone and the All Saints Home and School Association and the Gladstone PTA will conduct the Bicycle Rodeo from 1 to 4 p. m. at All Saints School.

Mrs. Samuel Hoyt is chairman of the event and she is being assisted by members of various service organizations.

A boys and a girls bicycle will be given at the completion of the safety check and testing. The Rotary Club has donated one bicycle and the PTA and Home and School Association have given the second one. Other prizes have been donated by Minnewasca Chapter 96, Order of the Eastern Star, Lions Club and the Chamber of Commerce.

The day's events will begin in the play area and parking lot of All Saints school with Girl Scouts conducting the check-in. The Gladstone City Police will be on hand to sell bicycle licenses to all owners who have not already purchased them. Bicycle licenses are good for the life of the Bicycle and need not be renewed.

Members of the Lions Club will make an inspection of all bicycles and will make minor safety repairs. The VFW and DeMolay boys will apply reflector tape to any bicycle without this safety factor.

The youngsters will then go into the Multipurpose room for their testing conducted by 4-H Girls and members of the Gladstone PTA and All Saints Home and School Association. Any child in first grade or over may take this test and become eligible for the prizes.

On the successful completion of this test the child may then participate in the Rodeo to show their riding skills.

The climax of the day's events will be the awarding of the two bicycles and several accessories.

We need a man (or woman), and a good one, to serve John Hancock policy owners. How does it pay? Well, we have two men who earned $10,000 in commissions in their first year. And that's only the beginning.

If you'r a doer, mature, educated, have had no previous life insurance sales experience, and are looking for a truly rewarding career (in every sense) with no relocation, then write or give us a call right now.
